Senate Will Vote Today On Atlantic Pact

Brannan Plan Proponents Fight Hard To Save It

By The Associated Press

Administration forces fought in the House yesterday to save the Brannan farm subsidy plan from threatened defeat. They shouted that it is necessary to prevent a collapse of the whole farm program.

The opposition responded with a charge the Administration bill gathers its support principally from organized labor—not from farmers. They argued it would lead ultimately to a peacetime OPA.

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan first submitted the subsidy plan to Congress as a means of getting cheaper food for consumers and good income for farmers.

Representative Sabath (D., Ill.), chairman of the House Rules Committee, kicked off for the Administration with a plea to Democrats not to be led astray "by a collusive combination of Republican-controlled farm organizations and Dixiecrats."

Vote Today or Friday

But some of President Truman's best friends in Congress opposed the Administration on the issue, which will come to a head in showdown voting today or Friday.

Three Democrats who often have carried the Administration banner in congressional battles—Gore of Tennessee, Monroney of Oklahoma and Rains of Alabama—helped lead an opposition coalition of Democrats and Republicans.

The coalition strove confidently to overwhelm the Administration bill, offered by Representative Pace (D., Ga.), and to enact instead a substitute by Gore to continue the present farm program for another year.

Chairman Cooley (D., N. C.) of the Agriculture Committee admitted frankly to the House the Administration bill is "in trouble." He blamed its predicament on "vicious propaganda and misrepresentation."

Brannan's Plan

Under Brannan's plan perishable crops would sell at what the market would pay and the Government (that is, the taxpayer) then would pay the farmers the difference between the average price they got and what the Government considered a fair price.

The present farm program supports the farmer's price in the market through Government loans and purchases that remove price-repressing surplus from the markets. Losses on such operations also are shouldered by the taxpayers.

All farm programs being considered in Congress contemplate production controls as part of the plan to maintain agricultural income, although foes of the Brannan plan charge it would lead to

Fewer Than 15 Negative Votes Seen

All Reservations Will Be Defeated Leaders Forecast; Opponents Agree

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate last night, in a final flood of oratory, cleared the way for ratification of the North Atlantic Defense treaty today without a single modifying change.

The Senate will start voting at 5 p. m. Leaders predicted confidently the pact will be approved with less than 15 votes against it. They said all reservations will be defeated. Opponents of the treaty privately agreed.

In one of the closing speeches, Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), chairman of the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee, said the United States will be under no obligation under the treaty to supply Western Europe with atom bombs or atomic secrets.

He said conceivably Western Europe could best be defended against attack "by a concentration of atomic weapons within the continental boundaries of the United States."

Two leading critics of arms-for-Europe under the pact, Senators Wherry (R., Nebr.) and Donnell (R., Mo.) drew out McMahon's views on the subject.

They said they wanted to know if the United States might have to supply atom bombs or bomb secrets under Article 3 mutual aid pledges.

McMahon said there is "no binding compulsion in the pact as to what kind of military assistance will be given." He said the exact nature of the military assistance we supply will not be determined until the arms program is worked out and Congress acts to implement the treaty.

After McMahon's speech, the Senate recessed at 8:30 p. m. until 11:15 a. m. today.

Critics of the pact, making their fight mainly "for the record," meanwhile produced the first Democratic speech against the treaty.

Senator Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho), third party running mate of Henry Wallace in the last campaign, attacked Adminstration foreign policy as "secretive and devious to such an extent as to border on being downright dishonest." He said he opposed the treaty because it "by-passes, undermines and weakens" the United Nations."

Wallace himself issued a statement calling for a two-week delay in the Senate vote so Senators "can read the newspapers—particularly the news from Great Britain." Wallace said the British have decided the "cold war" is over and are rushing trade agreements with Russia.

The Wallace proposal hardly stirred a ripple in a Senate that had made up its mind. One Democratic spokesman said Taylor's speech and the Wallace statement

Management to Continue

Times-Herald Bought By Chicago Tribune

Purchase of the Washington Times-Herald by the Chicago Trubune was announced here and in Chicago last night.

Word of the change in ownership came first from Chicago where Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of the Tribune, made this brief announcement:

"The Chicago Tribune bought the Washington Times-Herald today. The present management will be continued."

McCormick, cousin of the late Mrs. Eleanor M. (Cissy) Patterson, owner and publisher of the Times-Herald until her death July 24, 1948, did not disclose the sum of money involved in the sale.

Neither did the executors of the estate of Mrs. Patterson who announced the sale in a page 1 box in an edition of the Times-Herald which reached the street shortly after midnight.

The announcement by William C. Shelton, Frank C. Waldrop and Joseph W. Brooks, the executors, said that McCormick "has authorized us to say that the Times-Herald will continue 'business as usual,' and that the present staff of the Times-Herald will be retained."

The newspaper has almost 1000 employes, it was stated.

Top Officials Hold Session On A-Bomb And Britain

Post Reporter

The Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy held a lengthy conference yesterday with top Cabinet and Government officials on a possible change in relations with Great Britain in respect to the exchange of atomic bomb secrets.

Chairman McMahon (D., Conn.) made it clear after the two-hour, 45-minute session that the meeting was one of a series of protracted legislative conferences which will have to be held before the issues involved can be resolved.

Officials attending the conference included those who were present at President Truman's secret Blair House conference last Thursday night.

Eisenhower Present

Among them were: Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, on leave as president of Columbia University to act as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; Defense Secretary Johnson; Secretary of State Acheson, and all five members of the Atomic Energy Commission, as well as most of the 18 members of the committee.

McMahon's announcement about the meeting yesterday, which was surrounded by unusual security precautions—shades drawn and a uniformed policeman in front of the door—was brief and noncommittal.

But it is obvious that the subject of the conference is so involved that it will take a large number of legislative and other huddles before it can finally be determined anyway.

British and Canada?

The first question facing United States officials and the Congress is whether Britain and Canada should be given a share of information on postwar bomb designs and production methods.

Tied into that is another vexing problem—if the decision is made to transmit a greater share of information to Britain and Canada, can it be done by executive action or must Congress change the Atomic Energy Act?

Until the McMahon act was passed in 1946, atomic energy information was quite freely exchanged among the three countries. Passage of the law halted this exchange, although AEC Commissioners have testified that Britain made important contributions to the development of the first A-bomb at Los Alamos.

The British have announced their intention to make atom bombs and it is no secret they would like data on the latest American models and methods.

A 5-year-old boy was injured fatally by a car here and 12 persons were hurt near Hall, Md., when a Greyhound bus bound for Washington collided with a car and dropped down an embankment last night.

Earlier, two collisions halted traffic on Highway Bridge.

The District's 37th traffic fatality was William Meehan, of 1363 Maryland ave. ne., who died at Casualty Hospital at 9:30 p. m., after he was struck by a car at 14th and G sts. ne.

Police charged the driver of the auto, Matthew Stepienski, 37, of 1737 E st. ne., with failing to yield the right of way to a pedestrian.

Returning From Show

The boy, son of Peter Meehan, District Jail guard, and Mrs. Julia Meehan, suffered a crushed chest and head injuries, hospital authorities reported.

Police said the Greyhound bus was returning from Ocean City, Md., to Washington about 9 p. m. when it collided with an auto driven by Robert A. Coleman, jr., 17, of 4410 3d st. se.

Coleman said he lost control of his car when its wheels slid on a soft shoulder while he was trying to avoid the bus. He said he and four friends were driving to Oak Grove for a swimming party.

The bus dropped down a 5-foot embankment but no one was reported injured seriously. The accident was nine miles east of the District line. The driver, J. F. Baines, 29, of 812 Jefferson st. nw., was uninjured.

Six persons were treated on the scene. Coleman was treated at Sibley Hospital for cuts and bruises of the face and hands. Four others were in his car. They were:

$22,555 Tax Lien Notice Filed Against District Hotel Owner

By Benjamin C. Bradlee
Post Reporter

Dr. B. W. Reed, Connecticut ave., chiropractor and physiotherapist, yesterday described on method used by the Bureau of Internal Revenue to obtain more than 200 notices of tax liens against District residents in the last 10 days.

A lien notice against Reed for $639.93 was filed in District Court yesterday for 1945 income.

Reed said revenue agents inspected his books for that year and arrived at a tax due of $1400, the sum Reed said he had paid.

But agents then went to his bank, Reed said, and arrived at a different figure by totaling all

The Bureau of Internal Revenue filed 24 more tax lien notices yesterday in District Court, totaling more than $60,000 against Washington citizens and corporations.

Largest was 22,553.17 for 1945 income against Samuel H. Skeets, 1825 13th st. nw., real estate broker and owner of the Hotel Henry at that address. He is out of the city and could not be reached for comment.

A lien notice of $21,305.59 was filed against George Papanicolas and A. Papanicolas, 4735 Butterworth pl. nw., for 1948 income. The former purchased the Securities Building at 927 15th st. nw., for $428,500 in April, 1948. He said he had already settled with the

Senate Passes Full-Strength UnificationBill

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Passage of a military unification bill this year was virtually assured yesterday by a quick "one, two" in Congress.

Acting under a unanimous consent rule, the Senate adopted a legislative short cut and put settlement of the controversy into the hands of a joint conference committee. It substituted its own full unification plan for a watered-down House version and then passed the legislation.

Immediately afterward, Chairman Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee, announced his support of a full unification plan rather than the very limited House bill.

Vinson said he would back the House committee's earlier version of the unifying measure—the bill pigeon-holed by the group earlier this month. It differs only in detail from the Senate plan.

And Vinson said he would ask for a seven-man House contingent on the joint conference committee expected to be appointed today. A clear majority of the senior House members who would be appointed conferees back his stand.

Under the bill passed Monday by the House, only some uncontroversial fiscal reforms would be put into effect in the armed forces. However, both the Senate bill and the once-tabled House committee plan which Vinson backs, con-

Gens. Feldman, Waitt May Not Get Jobs Back

On the basis of present evidence, the two Army generals suspended in the "5 per center" investigation probably will not be court-martialed but are not expected to resume their posts.

That was the forecast last night of a highly placed defense official who is thoroughly familiar with the entire case. He emphasized that there has been no decision on the future of the two officers but that the evidence indicates a "lack of judgment" and "impropriety of conduct" rather than more serious offenses.

Temporarily Suspended

The officers—Maj. Gen. Alden H. Waitt, Chief of the Chemical Corps, and Maj. Gen. Herman Feldman, the Quartermaster General—were temporarily suspended from their posts last week by Army Secretary Gordon Gray.

Gray acted on the basis of facts developed by the Senate Investigating Committee's inquiry into the use of "influence" in obtaining military contracts.

Meanwhile, Senator Mundt (R., S. Dak.), a member of the committee, demanded that the group call Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, President Truman's military aide, to tell what he knows about the "5 per centers."

Vaughan has said that he knows "about 300 persons in Washington" who would fall in that category.

"Vaughan should be summoned before us and asked to identify as many as possible of the 300 contract men he says he knows," declared Mundt. "If he refuses to come, he should be subpenaed.

Wants to Know.

"I don't have any evidence at all and I know of none indicating that Vaughan is mixed up in this thing. But the subcommittee ought to find out whether he was just talking through his hat and windjamming or whether he actually knows something."

The "5 per center" probe resulted from the statement of Paul Grindle, a Massachusetts furniture manufacturer, that he paid $1000 to James V. Hunt, a former Army officer and WAA employe, for help in obtaining Government contracts.

Grindle charged, according to a copyrighted story in the New York Herald Tribune, that Hunt claimed he had influence with Generals Waitt, Feldman and Vaughan. Hunt has denied that he tried to sell "influence."

Representative Shafer (R., Mich.) has called on President Truman to suspend Vaughan.

Secretary Gray, in announcing Waitt's suspension, said that the Senate committee has evidence indicating that the Chemical Corps chief "improperly furnished personnel data to an individual not

Skin Needed By Rector Boy; Appeal Made

Michael Rector, 4-year-old Washington valiant, needs more skin.

His surgeon at Casualty Hospital yesterday made a special appeal for skin donors, preferably three healthy young men between the ages of 20 and 25 with A, RH positive blood.

Michael, whose body burns have already been covered and recovered by 17 large patches of skin given freely by nine donors, is in increasing pain, his surgeon said.

He needs six more four by eight-inch patches to ease that pain and carry him over what may be the last hump in his game fight to full recovery, the doctor said. And he should have them by this week's end, the doctor added.

Michael was carried into Casualty Hospital's emergency room last November 12, severely burned from the ankles to the armpits. He had run home a short time before, his clothing smouldering, after playing with children in a nearby garage. No one, least of all the burn specialists who worked on him, thought he could live with such burns covering 70 per cent of his body.

Yesterday's appeal by the hospital chief of surgery stressed that the sizable skin patches to be pared from the inner thighs of the volunteers would cause some pain, but leave only slight scars. The donors will be hospitalized without charge, and will get anesthetics.

Michael, it was pointed out, will have to go through the operation without anesthesia. But he has repeatedly proved he can take it.

Danaher Says He Won't Take Helm of GOP

Former Senator John A. Danaher (R., Conn.) last night pulled his name out of the race for the Republican national chairmanship.

Danaher, now practicing law here, said he would not be in a position to accept the post, because "obviously my first duty is to my clients and to the courts in which I have entered appearance."

The former $20,000-a-year GOP national committee official withdrew from the running after leading in most current speculation for the post.

House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin (Mass.), himself a former Republican national chairman, had just told newsmen Danaher was his personal preference to succeed Representative Hugh Scott (R., Pa.), who will hand in his resignation August 4.

Hollywood Expects Gang War After Shooting of Informer

MICKEY COHEN DEE DAVIS HARRY COOPER
Three Wounded by Los Angeles Gangland Bullets

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Hollywood, July 20 (U.P.).—A burst of gunfire aimed at mobster Mickey Cohen early today signaled what may be the start of major gang warfare, Attorney General Fred N. Howser said today.

Cohen and three of his party, including State Investigator Harry Cooper, were wounded as they stood in front of Sherry's restaurant.

Howser said the shooting was linked with the slaying of Benjamin (Bugsy) Siegel and a battle for control of racing wire services.

Howser said Cooper was assigned as bodyguard after Cohen's attorney said his client was in fear of his life and that major gang war was imminent.

"We had specific information as to the sources which might attempt to assassinate Cohen," Howser said. "We are not at liberty to divulge any other details at this time."

At San Diego, Admiral William H. Standley (USN, retired), chairman of Gov. Earl Warren's Commission on Organized Crime, said he would not be surprised if the attempt on Cohen's life "blows the top off some things."

Cohen and his party had gone to the restaurant for an early morning snack and were leaving when the shooting started.

When the smoke of more than a dozen shots had cleared Cohen was found with a slight shoulder wound. Edward (Needie) Herbert,

American Dice And Loud Woman Enter Monte Carlo

Monte Carlo, July 20 (NYHT). A woman's scream pierced the decorum of Monte Carlo Casino this afternoon.

A young lady from Worcester, Mass., had let 500 francs ride. The dice were hot. The 500 had become 1000, 2000, 4000. She threw again—an eleven. Her first reaction was to scream. Her second reaction was to gather in her chips.

For 87 years the casino had been restricted to roulette, chemin de fer, baccarat and trente et quarante. But war and hard times in Britain forced the Casino to adopt "le craps" to appeal to Americans.

Today, under the glare of flood lights a pair of dice, imported from Idaho, was rolled—the first dice ever to fall on a green baize table in Monte Carlo.

Israel and Syria Sign Armistice In No-Man's Land

Israel, July 20 (AP).—Israel and Syria, last of the Arab neighbors the Jewish state fought for its independence, signed an armistice today on a hill in the noman's land between their armies.

The agreement removes virtually the last threat of renewed fighting along Israel's frontiers, pending a final Palestine peace settlement.

Egypt, Lebanon and Trans-Jordan, the other Arab states having common frontiers with Israel, previously had signed similar armistice agreements.

7 Die in Storm In New England

Boston, July 20 (AP).—Southern New England sweltered all day through temperatures that reached as high as 99 degrees and then, in an abrupt change, was lashed tonight by a triple threat storm of lightning, rain and hail.

At least seven deaths were reported.

Rain, wind and hail caused damage that may run as high as a million dollars to the expensive onnecticut Valley tobacco crop.

Fires caused by lightning damaged scores of buildings.

Woods Expedites Own Project By Showing $7000 Bungalow

Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods yesterday offered his own solution to the housing problem—a small 14 by 36-foot "ramblerette," built of redwood siding in 3½ weeks, and priced at approximately $7000, including land.

Reporters inspected the furnished "pilot model" yesterday and saw a very small, low built bungalow, built on a concrete slab, with one bedroom, plywood walls, radiant glass panel heat, a kitchenette on one end of the living room, plus other architectural innovations designed to give comfort at low cost.

The home, one in a group of similar houses, is located about 25 miles from Washington, near Gunston rd., off Highway 1, between Fort Belvoir and Quantico, Va.

Housing Incorporated is the builder. Woods told a press conference called yesterday at his office that he was in no way connected with the building firm.

Asked to clarify his association with the project, since OHE press officers had called the conference and arranged for inspection of the pilot house, Woods said that he and William G. Barr, his special assistant at OHE, were financing the homes. R. J. Barr, jr., of Joliet, Ill., brother of Wood's assistant, is

Missing Atom Aide Shows Up; $1000 Embezzlement Charged

Santa Fe, N. M., July 20 (AP).—A charge of embezzling Red Cross money was filed today against H. Tracy Snelling, former information director at the Los Alamos atomic project.

The 37-year-old former Washington, D. C., newspaperman had been missing for a week. He turned up today at the Dallas, Tex., FBI office.

State Supreme Court Justice J. C. Compton, acting for the district judge, issued a warrant for Snelling's arrest. Bond was fixed at $5000.

At Los Alamos, Edwin Brooks, treasurer of the Los Alamos Red Cross, said Snelling had given him a personal check for $1000 in payment for proceeds taken in during a recent Red Cross campaign. Snelling headed the drive.

The check, written on a Santa Fe bank, was returned marked insufficient funds, Brooks said. The complaint against Snelling accused him of embezzlement on or about June 21.

Snelling was presumed to be on the way back to Santa Fe and Los Alamos by himself. District Attorney Bert Prince said he had no word on how Snelling was traveling or when he could be expected. The FBI would not comment.

Hiss Subpena Needless, Says Frankfurter

By The Associated Press

Justice Frankfurter said yesterday he "deemed it an unnecessary formality to be formally served with a subpena" to testify as character witness at the Alger Hiss perjury trial in New York.

Frankfurter and Justice Reed testified as character witnesses for Hiss. Mrs. Reed said Tuesday that her husband was subpenaed by defense lawyers.

The question whether the justices appeared voluntarily was raised as the result of a move in Congress to exempt Supreme Court members from any compulsion to testify in such circumstances. Reached at Heath, Mass., where he is vacationing, Frankfurter told the Associated Press by telephone:

"I appeared as a witness in the trial of Alger Hiss because his counsel deemed it their duty to put my testimony before the jury. They had a right to my testimony because, under the Constitution, every accused has the right to produce evidence relevant to determining his guilt or innocence. The reputation of an accused is such a revelant matter, especially under a charge of perjury. Since counsel felt they must draw on the testimony I was under duty to give, I deemed it an unnecessary formality to be formally served with a subpena.

"Of course, no member of the Supreme Court should needlessly disqualify himself from participation in a case that may come before the court. But the circumstances that qualified me as a character witness at the trial would necessarily disqualify me from sitting in any case involving Alger Hiss, even if I had not been a witness in his case. As is patent from the public records, every year members of the court abstain from participation in cases because of some past relation to a party litigant or any other interested party in a litigation."

Hiss, a former State Department official, was charged with perjury in connection with charges that Whittaker Chambers, one-time Communist courier, obtained secret Government documents from him. The jury failed to reach a verdict. The Government has said it will try Hiss again in the fall.

Senator O'Conor (D., Md.) yesterday described as "ill-advised and ill-timed" legislation to bar Supreme Court justices from testifying as character witnesses in a criminal trial.

"Such a law, if enacted, would be improper interference with the judiciary and it is extremely doubtful if it would stand the test of constitutionality," he said in a statement.

A bill to bar Supreme Court justices as character witnesses has been introduced by Representative Keating (R., N. Y.).

O'Conor said the three branches of government are "separate and distinct and must be kept so."

$30,000 Asked For Injuries at Soap Box Derby

A $30,000 damage suit was filed yesterday in District Court as a result of injuries said to have been received by a boy during the 1946 Soap Box Derby here.

The suit was filed for Franklin Nicholson, 16, by his father, Frank Nicholson, 138 Q st. nw. Defendants are The Evening Star Newspaper Co., Inc., General Motors, Inc., and the District Department American Legion.

According to the suit, the Nicholson boy was a guard for the event and dashed into the race course to rescue a small child that wandered there. Franklin saved the child from injury but received a broken arm, injured shoulder and other injuries himself, it was charged.

Condon Says Own Case Shows Need for Protection on 'Hill'

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Dr. Edward U. Condon, citing "my own case" as an example, yesterday urged support of legislation to safeguard the rights of persons attacked in congressional committee investigations.

Appearing before a Senate Rules Subcommittee to testify on a resolution introduced by Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas, Dr. Condon, the director of the National Bureau of Standards, declared:

"Not only in my own case, but in those of others, the procedures of the House Committee on Un-American Activities have caused considerable troubles and the waste of important time."

He said the Lucas resolution, which would permit accused persons to make full statements in their behalf and to summon and cross-examine up to four witnesses, "would go a long way toward making such extravagances (as his own case) impossible."

. . . scientist at hearing

In March, 1948, without hearing testimony from Dr. Condon, a report from a House Un-American Activities Subcommittee headed by Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) charged that Condon was "one of the weakest links in our atomic security."

Dr. Condon later was cleared by the Atomic Energy Commission for secret work on atomic research, and has never been called by the House committee for a promised probe.

[Representative Nixon (R., Calif.), a member of the Committee on Un-American Activities, told the Associated Press yesterday he is going to ask at the next meeting that the committee take up the Condon case and consider subpenaing the scientist.

["We should decide this thing once and for all," he said. "It looks a little foolish for the committee to keep on saying it is willing to hear Condon and for Condon to say he would like to be heard and for neither to do anything about it."—Editor's Note.)

Cites Horns of Dilemma

"I believe wholeheartedly in the necessity for full powers of investigation by Congress," Dr. Condon testified yesterday before the Senate subcommittee headed by Senator Francis J. Myers (D., Pa.).

". . . This is a basic principle of our Government," said Dr. Condon, and it is a vital one. In my opinion, congressional committees have, in general, used these powers carefully in the best interests of the Nation . . .

"But what we are faced with, in a sense, is a dilemma.

"On the one hand, we want our Government to possess absolute powers of investigation in order to assure the security of our democracy. On the other hand, we wish to sustain the sanctity of the individual, for democracy cannot survive if the rights of the individual are sacrificed.

"Our problem is to reconcile these two apparently antagonistic desires."

Likes Lucas Resolution

He said he believes the Lucas resolution does this, for while it "does not guarantee that an individual will not suffer attacks which he may consider, or which actually may be unjust and cruel . . . it does guarantee that he will not be attacked surreptitiously and and that he will have the chance to be heard."

During the hearing, Senator Myers asked Dr. Condon if he would care to give his views on whether he believes a Communist has "any constitutional right to work for the Government."

Dr. Condon, saying he was not any authority on constitutional law, said he believed "under the present conditions it would be desirable that there should be an interpretation in which they would not have any particular rights in the matter."

Asked his opinion on the Federal loyalty requirements of employes, he said the "general policy is a good one," although there are "some questions about details."

In discussing his experiences with the House Committee on Un-American Activities, Dr. Condon said recent actions show "great improvement over the behavior of the same committee in the Eightieth Congress," but "still leave a lot to be desired."

Dr. Condon stated that during most of 1947 there appeared "unfriendly newspaper articles about me attributed to committee sources, saying that I was being investigated by the committee and implying that sinister revelations were soon to be made."

In June at that year, he said, Representative Thomas wrote two magazine articles "presumably for compensation," containing "derogatory innuendos about me."

"Struck Without Warning"

He wrote to Thomas the next month, he said, offering "full cooperation" in the committee's investigation, and received no reply. Then on March 1, 1948, "striking without warning," Thomas charged in a news statement that "I was untrustworthy and unfit for public office."

Later that month, he said, he "accepted with pleasure" a subpena to appear before the committee, and his attorneys inquired about hearing procedure but received no reply. On April 14, 1948, he said he receved a telegram stating the hearing was indefinitely postponed, and has never received any further communicaton.

One Section 'More Restriction'

Under the Lucas resolution, he pointed out, there could have been no published charges against him until he was given opportunity to reply; Representative Thomas could not have alluded to him in magazine articles, and he would have had opportunity to present his position to the committee.

Dr. Condon said the resolution should make it clear that it would require action by a full committee to make public any "derogatory information" about a person.

Pageant Lays Financial Egg In Alexandria

Alexandria's bicentennial pageant "Alexandria, Thy Sons," which closed Tuesday night, was an aesthetic success but a financial flop.

With more than $30,000 tied up in its production, the play took in only $6000 at the box office. Bad weather which canceled three performances probably was partly to blame. But the total paid attendance at the six performances given was not enough to fill the 7500 capacity theater once.

Officials said, however, there will be no problem about paying bills. The cost of the pageant was guaranteed by an appropriation from the city in its 1949 budget.

Czech Reds Claim Right to Speak For Catholics

Prague, July 20 (AP).—The government-sponsored Catholic Action Movement now has taken over as spokesman for Czechoslovak Roman Catholics, the newspaper Lidova Demokracie said today.

The newspaper report indicated the government is preparing to deal directly with the separatist organization and have no further exchanges with the bishops.

This would open the way for obtaining "Catholic approval" for a new church-state agreement on government terms and for a proposed 19-point law for control of churches.

200 Merchants Attend Session To Prepare for Sales Levy

More than 200 District merchants attended a sales tax meeting held yesterday by the Merchants and Manufacturers Association in the Chamber of Commerce Building auditorium.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Harry L. Walker answered a group of 35 questions propounded by association members on the sales tax regulations. He announced that printed copies of the regulations are expected to be made available at the District Building beginning Tuesday.

Walker, who helped draft the revenue act, promised retailers the District officials did not expect "merchants to keep store all day and books all night." He said they would be required to maintain only sufficient records so that enforcement men could make an audit.

He warned, however, that there is no statute of limitations on false or fraudulent returns and the law provides substantial penalties for failure to comply.

Walker announced that Sales Tax Administrator Allan F. Brooke has received several applications from nearby Maryland and Virginia merchants for "use tax" certificates so they may begin collecting the tax on sales to District residents after August 1.

He said Brooke, who was present at the session, has promised to "make every effort to get dealers delivering in the District of Columbia to collect the tax" just as local retailers have been doing for Maryland authorities on sales to Free State patrons.

Assistant Corporation Counsel George F. Lynch explained the cigarette tax law and changes on real estate and alcoholic beverage taxes. He announced that Superintendent of Licenses Chatham T. Nottingham is mailing out applications for the cigarette licenses and if such forms are not received, affected dealers should inform him.

The association's legal counsel, Ringgold Hart, said retailers should immediately apply for certificates of registration so they may begin collecting the sales tax on August 1. They face a fine if they do not do so, he pointed out.

'Lonely Hearts'

Sex Details Shock Jury at Murder Trial

New York, July 20 (U.P.).—Women jurors at the "lonely hearts" trial gasped today as balding, gold-toothed Raymond Fernandez described the abnormal sex acts he said he was "led into" to please 200-pound Mrs. Martha Beck, now his codefendant on murder charges.

The 32-year-old Fernandez said his obese paramour "screamed and got frenetic" during their embrace and then told him:

"I felt something I never felt before."

The embarrassed jurors then heard Fernandez tell of a strip poker game between himself, Mrs. Beck and a woman he had just married. The women finally agreed that the one who held the high hand on the next deal could sleep that night with Fernandez.

"Martha won," he said.

Fernandez opened his testimony with a flat denial that he had killed or planned to kill Mrs. Janet Fay, 66, one of the many women he met through a "mail order romance" club and who lived with him while Mrs. Beck posed as his sister.

After corresponding with and meeting numerous women, he said, he went to Pensacola, Fla., where Mrs. Beck was living. Later Fernandez returned to New York, writing Mrs. Beck that she didn't "appeal to me." He invited her to New York after two attempts to kill herself, he said.

"Did you live happily with Mrs. Beck?" his attorney asked.

"In a way happy, in a way unhappy because of her sexual desires," said Fernandez.

"Did you and Mrs. Beck enjoy normal sexual relationships at the time?"

"In certain ways—I did and she didn't—that's why we both went to the doctor," Fernandez replied.

He said the prescription of the physician had no effect on Mrs. Beck and that one evening, as they lay in bed, she began to cry. He asked her why she reluctantly told him the doctor had suggested another means of satisfying her.

His attorney pressed him to elucidate and Fernandez said he was "too embarrassed." The prosecution objected strenuously but Judge Ferdinand Pecora permitted Fernandez to continue Birmingham, Ala., July 20 (U.P.). An Alabama official said today that Ku Klux Klan members have been identified by the insignia on their "bedsheet' uniforms as participants in four of the recent floggings in the Birmingham area.

Rev. Lyons

Assistant State Attorney General Taylor Harden reported the Klan's connection with the outrages at a conference with the Jefferson County (Birmingham) legislative delegation in Montgomery.

Seventeen persons have been indicted and arrested in connection with the extended wave of terrorism in Jefferson County. An eighteenth man, R. C. Lyons, a Holiness preacher who allegedly acted as "chaplain" for floggings, was jailed without bond today.

Circuit Judge Alta King recalled the Jefferson grand jury today for a renewed investigation "including floggings."

A new flogging was reported last night, the first since the State passed an antimasking bill.

At Goodwater, Ala., an admitted Klansman was flogged by a band of armed, unmasked men last night, the Associated Press said.

The victim, Scover Gough Bailey, 25, World War II veteran, said he was positive his assailants were not members of the Ku Klux Klan.

"I'm a member of the Klan myself," he said.

Bailey said he and a Negro were taken to Millersville, in Clay County, for the whipping. He added that the men who whipped him and the Negro said they were all former service men.

Two Forays By Vice Squad Net 3 Here

Vice Squad detectives, in two separate forays yesterday afternoon, arrested three men and charged them with operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips.

At a poolroom at 5214 Foote st. ne., they took Charles T. Harrison, 27, of 516 55th st. ne., on a warrant obtained on evidence formulated previously by an undercover man. While they were there, a man entered, saw the policeman and fled.

After a chase of a block he was taken, and officers said he had numbers slips in his possession. He was identified as Leon Ables, 19, of 5316 Bell pl. ne. Both will go before United States Commissioner C. S. Lawrence today.

Walking in the 500 block of S st. nw. about the same time, other Vice Squad officers said they saw numbers slips sticking from the pocket of Willie Poteat, 45, of 1838 4th st. nw. He will go to Municipal Court today.

Bulgars Name Long-TimeRed As Premier

Sofia, Bulgaria, July 20 (U.P.). Vasil Kolarov, 72-year-old Foreign Minister, today was unanimously elected Premier by Parliament today to succeed his years-long Communist Party Associate, Georgi Dimitrov, who died July 2.

Kolarov

At the same time, five other leaders in the leftist coalition were named Vice Premiers.

Acting on a proposal submitted yesterday, Parliament threw former Vice Premier Traicho Kostov out of his seat in the chamber.

A special report charged Kostov with an "anti-Soviet, anti-Fatherland Front, anti-People's Policy of Nationalist Activities."

Kostov had been the No. 2 man, after Dimitrov, in the postwar Communist Party setup with Kolarov as No. 3.

[It was disclosed tonight that the presidium of the parliament had approved Kostov's detention preparatory to prosecution against him, the Associated Press said.

[According to a letter from the supreme prosecutor to the presidium. Kostov will be tried for economic sabotage under a law which provides for the heaviest punishment, life imprisonment or death.]

The Vice Premiers named today to serve with Kolarov are Valko Chervenkov, Anton Yugov and Dobri Terpeshev, Communists; Georgi Traikov, Agrarian, and Kimon Georgiev, nonparty.

Kolarov, bald-headed and thick-necked, has been a Communist for 50 years. He spent 22 years in exile. He and Dimitrov led the 1923 uprising in Sofia and fled together when it failed.

Death Toll 7 When Air Transport Slices Off Two Floors of Seattle Rooming House

SCENE AFTER SEATTLE CRASH IN WHICH SEVEN DIED, SEVERAL HOMES WERE WRECKED

Seattle, July 20 (AP).—A Chicago-bound, nonscheduled air transport plane, with one of its two engines dead, sliced through two floors of a rooming house last night and smashed into a residential street, killing seven persons. Two of the dead were passengers, five were in the rooming house.

Thirty others were injured, but death was cheated of more victims by just two minutes—the interval between the crash and an earth-rocking, flaming explosion.

In those 120 seconds nearly all the 32 passengers and crewmen tumbled out to safety from the C-47 passenger plane owned by Air Transport Associates of Seattle.

The dead were:

Frank Catalica of Kalamazoo, Mich., and Laurence Furio, Chicago, both passengers; Frank Morgan, 65, machinist; Edward Brightcamp, 71, pensioner; Olavi N. Niemi, 45; Ralph Parker, and Pete Chumas, all of Seattle and residents of the rooming house.

The plane took off from Boeing Field in Seattle's south side at 10:03 p. m. and was barely in the air when its left engine failed.

Its wings sheared utility poles and clipped power lines in a blazing flash. As the pilot lost his fight to keep the craft aloft a wing sliced the two top stories from the rooming house where 18 persons were living.

Witnesses said flames poured from one engine. The crippled ship roared across Harney st. and pulled up in the home of George A. Cordas. At least three other homes were damaged by the wings or by the fire which followed.

But in two drama-packed minutes the passengers broke free of the demolished plane and they jumped or were thrown through a gap.

Aboard was Amos E. Heacock, president of Air Transport Associates, Inc. He said he checked all the seats, then went forward and found the three pilots tangled in safety belts and wreckage. He pulled them free and tossed them clear.

His wife, Dorothy Heacock, acting as stewardess, was trapped between seats and Heacock freed her. He left the plane an instant before the explosion.

Gasoline flooded the area and the debris burned furiously. Three and a half hours after the crash four firemen were hurt, none seriously, when a gasoline tank from the wrecked craft exploded.

From his hospital bed Reserve Pilot James Adams said he realized the crash was coming and "it wasn't good to think about."

"It was a hell of a place for engine trouble," he said. "I remember figuring it was a hell of a thing with all those houses under us, and the people in them and in the ship."

Civil Aeronautics Board's investigators said the craft's engines would be torn down to determine the reason for the apparent power plant failure.

It was the second time a chartered airplane had crashed here within seven months. Just after Christmas 11 Yale University students died when a nonscheduled air liner smashed into a Boeing Field building on take-off. Three crew members also died.

Bribery Laid To Man in Pearson Suit

Fresno, Calif., July 20 (U.P.).—FBI agents today arrested Walter Lentz, former chief special agent for California Attorney General Frederick Howser, on charges of bribing a witness called to defend columnist-radio commentator Drew Pearson against a $300,000 libel suit brought by Howser. The suit was filed in Federal District Court in Washington, D. C.

The FBI said Lentz, who resigned under fire during an investigation of slot-machine payoffs to State agents in California, had been working for Howser as a private investigator in the libel case.

Lentz was charged with attempting to bribe James T. Mulloy of Fresno, who last April told Pearson that he delivered a $1200 bribe to Howser from Long Beach gamblers. Mulloy's statement subsequently was broadcast by the columnist and formed the basis of the libel suit.

Bail was set at $5000. The complaint charged that "Lentz on or about July 6 of this year did cause to be paid to J. T. Mulloy a sum of money for the purpose of influencing the said Mulloy's testimony."

Lentz posted bail and was released.

N. & W. Flyer With Lots of Crust Hits Load of Pies

Fort Gay, W. Va., July 20 (AP).—The Powhatan Arrow, fast passenger train of the Norfolk & Western Railway, hit a truck-trailer loaded with hundreds of pies yesterday. It made quite a splatter.

The cab of the truck had cleared the crossing, but the Arrow, clipping along at 70, slammed into the trailer.

"You should have seen that locomotive," said roadmaster's clerk Homer Christian here. "It's likely getting its face washed today."

Pies, turned out by the Fricke Pie Co., Huntington, littered the right of way, to the delight of numerous small fry who had a field day. Some of the elders did, too.

Presentation was made by O. W. Blaier of the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Jointers at a dinner in the Hamilton Hotel.

Recipients were Donald M. Wallace, Philip Hamilton, John A. Minor and Edward G. Loehl. Chairman of the dinner committee was Edgar Appel.

Driver Accused Of Attempting To Hit Couple

Edward R. Harris, 27, a Greyhound bus driver, of 211 3rd st. ne., was held in $1000 bond yesterday for the grand jury on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon.

The weapon in the case was an automobile, Judge Thomas D. Quinn was told in Municipal Court.

The complainant is Leo F. Jenifer, 41, of 1825 Central pl. ne. Jenifer said on June 25, while he was walking with a woman at Gallaudet and Corcoran sts. ne., a car driven by Harris narrowly missed them.

According to Jenifer, Harris cursed at him as he drove past. Jenifer said he answered in kind, then Harris got out of his car and struck him. There was a fight.

Later, Jenifer said, Harris attempted to run him and the woman down. He was arrested four days after the incident.

Youth Arrested Outfitting Himself at Store's Expense

An industrious youth with a retentive memory almost got a complete outfit of new clothes for himself yesterday morning, for free, but missed by less than five minutes.

At 5 a. m. Police Pvt. Thomas J. McDermitt, "shaking doors" in an alley in the rear of Morton's store, 427 7th st. nw., noticed a pile of nine boxes that hadn't been there on his round three hours earlier. He also noticed that a swinging fire escape had been moved.

Just as he started to climb the fire escape, he heard steps below, jumped down and grabbed a young man identified later as William M. Smith, 18, 1108 8th st. ne. Smith admitted he was coming for the boxes, which he also admitted having filled and neatly sealed inside the store.

In the boxes were seven pairs of shoes, 9½ dozen pairs of sox, a sports jacket, 2 trench coats, 40 ties, 10 polo shirts, seven pairs of slacks, 30 pairs of shorts, and two topcoats, of a total value of $200.

Smith, who admitted being on parole from the National Training School, said he had "cased" the Morton store before receiving his sentence over a year ago. He said he needed clothing and returned early yesterday to get it. But the store had been rearranged and his sizes weren't where they had been before he went to jail. So he ransacked the place until he found them.

Private McDermitt said Smith had a cab waiting nearby for the load of boxes.

U. S. Commissioner C. S. Lawrence held Smith under $1500 bond on a housebreaking charge and continued hearing to July 28.

Battle Calls School Sales Tax Needless

By William H. Smith
Post Reporter

State Senator John S. Battle, last night reiterated his contention that Virginia's sagging school construction program can be bolstered by surplus funds which are now accruing to the State's treasury.

Addressing a rally of more than 2500 persons at the home of Arlington Commissioner of Revenue Harry K. Greene, the Virginia gubernatorial candidate attacked as "unnecessary" a sales tax proposal which has been advanced by Horace Edwards, another candidate for the Democratic nomination.

Battle said the State treasury is now in "very healthy condition," and that a surplus of 15 million dollars is already available. He suggested that another 15 million dollars be appropriated by the State legislature for schools to provide the 30-million-dollar total that Edwards contends would go to schools from a sales tax.

The sales tax not only is unnecessary but impractical at a time when "the people of Virginia can stand no higher taxes," he said.

Battle lashed out at Francis Pickens Miller, another candidate for the Democratic nomination on the ground that "the only proposal he has made is an impractical suggestion for financing the school program."

Battle said Miller's suggestion that the State assume the full burden of paying teachers' salaries would deprive local communities of any control over their schools.

"Under his proposal," Battle said, "school policies would be controlled and teachers would be hired and fired directly from Richmond."

Battle did not discuss any issues involving Remmie Arnold, the fourth candidate for the party nomination. He simply termed Arnold "a fine gentleman and excellent fountain pen manufacturer."

Earlier Battle's candidacy was vigorously indorsed by Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond who said he not only supported Battle because of his personal interest in the candidate, but in the interest of Virginia's public welfare.

Among ranking Democratic leaders on hand for the rally were Senator Harry F. Byrd, generally regarded as "boss" of the Virginia machine, Representative Howard W. Smith and numerous State and local officials from Arlington and nearby counties.

The rally had been planned for the front lawn of the Greene home at 1407 N. Barton st., but because of the unexpected size of the crowd, flowed into and across the street and into the yards of neighboring homes.

Battle will spend today in Alexandria and environs. He will hold a press conference at the George Mason Hotel in the morning and address a woman's luncheon at Laura Lee's Old Club at 12:30 p. m. At 4 p. m. he will be guest of honor at a tea at the Courthouse Country Club in Fairfax County. Returning to Alexandria, he will attend a public reception at the George Mason Hotel at 6:30 p. m., and address a rally at the George Washington High School beginning at 8 p. m.

Senate Orders Churchill to Mind Own Business

By the United Press

Senator Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho) suggested yesterday that Britain's former Prime Minister, Winston Churchill, "stay home and mind his own business."

"Without objection so ordered," said the Senate's presiding officer, Senator Edward J. Thye (R., Minn.) absent-mindedly.

"Good, let that appear in the Record," said Taylor.

The Senate roared with laughter and Thye, who was reading when Taylor made his remark, looked up with surprise.

The remark—and Thye's ruling—will stay in the official Record unless they are ordered stricken.

Byrd Organization Desperate for Votes, Edwards Says

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Lynchburg, Va., July 20.—Horace H. Edwards said tonight that the "Byrd organization" devised false propaganda of a two-man contest" in the current gubernatorial campaign as long ago as last Christmas.

They "kept it under wraps" until a few weeks ago because they became "desperate and frantic for votes" when they realized his strength as a candidate, Edwards said.

The former mayor of Richmond said that State Senator John S. Battle, the organization candidate, is holding up Francis Pickens Miller as "the man to beat" because of a scheme developed late last year by Senator Harry F. Byrd, Gov. William M. Tuck, and E. R. Combs, chairman of the State Compensation Board.

Since Byrd's appearance at Harrisonburg 10 days ago, the theory that the race is a two-man fight has been pursued "desperately," Edwards said.

"In politics," Edwards told a reporter before making two speeches here tonight, "you depreciate your most dangerous enemy."

"Battle and Miller appreciate each other, according to propaganda on one hand that Battle is the man to beat, on the other hand, that Miller is the man to beat."

Edwards said he has discovered in his campaign that "the enemies of Miller are most interested in defeating Miller, while the enemies of Battle are most interested in defeating Battle."

These two groups are combining "all over the State" to accomplish their purpose "by swinging into line for me," Edwards said.

Part of the strategy was evident in the "organization's" selection of Sydney S. Kellam, treasurer of Princess Anne County, as Battle's campaign manager, Edwards said. This was done "to cut into my strength down there," where Kellam is an influential organization Democrat. Edwards once worked in the shipyards at Newport News.

Tourists See Farm Rebuilt in Decade

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Southern Marlyand Soil Conservation Tour yesterday saw how a Navy officer can build up a run-down farm after he retires from the sea.

About 200 automobiles loaded with tourists, many from Washington, rode over the carefully contoured fields of the 575-acre estate of Capt. Newton H. White, USN (retired), just 7 miles southeast of the District of Columbia.

White retired 10 years ago, and at once started to farm. He and Mrs. White purchased some badly eroded land in Prince Georges County and started modern farming practices even before a Soil Conservation District was started there.

After 300 years of being cropped almost continually with tobacco, the topsoil was completely washed away in some spots, White told the group. Cover crops, and soil building crops have succeeded in making those acres richly productive, he asserted.

Appointed in 1903

White was appointed to the Naval Academy at Annapolis in 1903 from Pulaski, Tenn. That was a "one-crop" country, growing only cotton, he said. When he bought the Southern Maryland farm, that also was one-crop country, he declared, the crop being tobacco.

"Let me warn you stay away from a one-crop economy," he said. "It isn't good for the land, for the farm or for the community."

When the Whites first bought the farm, it was producing about five "barrels" of corn (about 25 bushels) to the acre. This year, with corn fields that would make Iowa proud, they expect to harvest from 13 to 15 barrels, or about 65 to 75 bushels.

(Maryland is the only State still using the ancient barrel measurement for corn—discarded elsewhere at the time of the Revolutionary War.)

The White farm has 173 acres of cropland, 175 acres of pasture and 203 acres of woodland. It boasts one of Southern Maryland's best dairy herds, with about 60 head of Holstein and Guernsey cattle.

Field of Fescue Grass

In the morning, the tour stopped at the J. Stanley Wilburn farm just outside Upper Marlboro. There they saw a small field of Kentucky 31 Fescue grass—one of the first fields to be grown in this area. Wilburn planted 10 pounds of fescue imported from Kentucky this spring. Last week he harvested 40 pounds of seed, for use next year. Fescue is a very rich forage grass that furnishes longer pasturage than any older grasses.

At noon the group heard Harold Sothoron, State Senator and member of the Potomac River Pollution Commission, plead for soil conservation. Sothoron told the group that the commission's studies of river pollution showed much of it could be avoided by measures to halt erosion. Waters washing off the soils of Maryland and Virginia are responsible for the silting and pollution of the Potomac and other streams near by.

Brannan Foes, Backers Tilt

far more regimentation than at present.

Democrats on the House Agriculture Committee approved a bill that would permit a three-crop trial run of the Brannan plan. An amendment is pending that would specify that the trial-run crops be eggs, potatoes and wool.

Cooley and Representative Pace told the House the idea of production payments or subsidies grew out of the millions of dollars the Government lost in supporting potatoes and eggs. Unless some means is found to avoid such costs, the whole farm program may collapse, he said.

Pace asked the House how long the American people would countenance spending of "hundreds of millions of dollars to support a program that lets food rot on the ground or feeds it to the hogs." He referred particularly to the large costs incurred by the Government in supporting potato prices.

Representative Hope of Kansas, the House Republican farm leader, said that instead of letting farmers write their legislation, the Brannan plan "means turning farm legislation over to the heads of some of the big labor organizations."

He said the American Farm Bureau Federation and the National Grange oppose the Administration bill, and he read from labor publications supporting it.

"It's all right for labor to approve farm legislation," Hope said, "but shouldn't it be approved by farm organizations."

Hope said "if the Brannan plan is adopted the next thing you're going to have is a request for price controls all the way down the line to make the plan work."

Representative Monroney also warned that the subsidy plan may lead to a peacetime OPA.

Gore told the House the Administration bill proposes that "we take a leap in the dark."

He said Congress is being asked "to indorse a cluster of delusionary promises of food both cheap and expensive at the same time, asked to approve a policy that would make the farmer dependent upon appropriations from the Treasury for a large part of his pay for what he produces."

Such a plan was tried in Germany under Hitler and failed, he said.

the money deposited to his account. Agents claimed his income was the total of his bank deposits, the doctor said.

Reed says that total is false.

"Many times a man gives me a check for $50. I might give him $10 change and then deposit his check. My income would be $40, not $50. But the agents claim I got the $50, he said.

Reed also said that agents had notified him of $543 due on his 1945 tax "months ago," but told him to "sit tight" until he was formally notified by the Bureau.

"I guess this was the formal notification," Reed said, "plus $100 in interest. That doesn't seem right. They ask me to wait, then charge me interest for the time I waited."

Reed said he thought he could beat the case in court, but said "It would cost me just as much to hire a lawyer and fight the case as it would for me to pay the tax."

"There's no use fighting it," he said.

Government In Britain Split By Dock Tieup

London, July 20 (NYHT).—The Labor Government and its National Dock Labor Board, which controls port working conditions, were split today on how the 15,500 idle London dockers should be persuaded to go back to work.

The dispute threatened to develop into a serious political issue.

The N. D. L. B. last night ordered the idle dockers to go back to work Thursday morning or face possible withdrawal of guarantees of week's pay whether dockers work or not.

The N. D. L. B. order was repudiated in a cabinet statement early today.

Government sources said Prime Minister Attlee feared the order may provoke a national strike in sympathy with the idle dockers.

Labor Minister George Isaacs came under severe attack from Conservatives—and won some praise from Labor members—when he sought to explain in the House today.

He pointed out only the government and Parliament can alter the guarantees.

Lord Ammon, chairman of the N.D.L.B., who also is chief whip in the House of Lords, told reporters he thought the government had "gone crazy" in issuing its repudiation of the board.

"I think they have gone a little panicky," he said.

There were immediate reports these remarks might cost him his position as government whip. He cannot be dismissed as chairman of the N.D.L.B., although he might be forced to resign.

He met Attlee for 30 minutes today but refused comment.

A total of 15,509 men and 45 ships were idle today. More than 9000 troops, were at work on 92 ships.

Barbara Hutton Seriously Ill In Venice; Weighs Mere 84 Lbs.

Venice, Italy, July 20 (U.P.).—Heiress Barbara Hutton, 36, weighing less than 84 pounds and too weak to stand, is confined to her bed at the Grand Hotel here with a "serious illness," the hotel manager said tonight.

Prince Igor Troubetzkoy, her fourth husband, is with her.

A serious stomach ailment, her physician said, has "resulted at intervals in immediate danger for the life of the patient."

The illness reportedly stemmed from her drastic dieting in her early 20s. She once lost more than 30 pounds by living on black coffee for weeks at a time.

Because of her illness, her attorneys in Dedham, Mass., today won an extension until September 15 of the custody of her son, Lance Renventlow, 13, born of her marriage to Count Kurt von Haugwitz-Renventlow, her second husband.

The heiress to the Woolworth five and dime fortune, has undergone four operations and has had three large segments of the small intestine removed, her doctor said.

Other notices filed by the Bureau's Baltimore office yesterday include one for $6455.88 against Harry Roy Stringer, of the Chastleton Hotel. Stringer is former chief of the information service of the United States Maritime Commission, and former vice chairman of the Sea-Air Committee of the National Federation of American Shipping. The bureau claimed he owed the money on 1945 income. He could not be reached for comment.

Lien notes of $3000 against the 1947 income of Avondale Park, Inc., 15th and K sts. nw., and of $2443.45 against the Ben Mar Restaurant at 421 11th st. nw., were also filed.

The bureau filed a notice of $2018.20 against Ben Rose, president and treasurer of Rose's, Inc., a liquor store. He also could not be reached.

Three Government employes were involved in the bureau's suits: Charles Edward Mason, 1939 4th st. ne., Postoffice Department employe; Frank L. Norris, 2015 15th st. nw., State Department clerk, and Marjorie W. Rose, 1257 Evarts st. ne., Veterans Administration clerk, claims against them totaled $569.

Mrs. Grillo Billed $291

The bureau claimed Mildred Grillo, trading as Grillo Concession Inc., 919 12th st. nw., failed to pay $291.28 in withholding tax and Federal insurance contributions. She is the wife of Vincent R. Grillo, former operator of the Spotlight Club, 17th and M sts. nw. The club's furniture was sold at auction after it had been seized for nonpayment of $515 in personal property taxes in 1948. Mrs. Grillo declined to comment.

A claim of $248.79 was lodged against Luther Johnson, jr., 1429 D st. se., who was arrested in May of 1947 for operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips. He could not be reached for comment.

In the last 10 days, the Internal Revenue Department has filed tax lien notices against more than 200 Washington individuals.

Correction

In a story about income tax liens in The Washington Post yesterday, Rufus S. Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association, also was identified as secretary of the Building Owners and Managers Association.

Charles J. Bauer is executive secretary of the latter association. He succeeded Lusk in the post about a year and a half ago. The Washington Post regrets the error.

Donaldson Warns Against Changes

By the United Press

Postmaster General Donaldson yesterday hinted he might resign if Congress adopts a Hoover Commission proposal to split his department into 15 regional offices.

"I wouldn't want to be Postmaster under that kind of a setup," he told the Senate Postoffice Committee. "You'd have nothing but a figurehead in Washington."

The committee is consdering legislation to revamp the postal service, including a bill by Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) which would put into effect all Hoover Commission recommendations dealing with the Postoffice.

"No Uniformity of Control"

The commission, headed by former President Herbert Hoover, wants to split the postal service into 15 regions, each with a regional director of posts who would supervise all mail transportation in their areas.

The regions would be divided further into 80 districts. District superintendents would be in direct charge of all postoffices.

"This would be tantamount to 95 Postmasters General," Donaldson objected. "There could be no uniformity of control. Congress would lose control of the Postal Department."

Donaldson said he favors the other Hoover Commission proposals, but that most can be carried out without legislation. He submitted his own bill to carry out one commission plan—to place his department under the corporation control law.

Would Allow More Freedom

This would give the Postoffice more of the freedom of a private business in handling its money and employes, and it would not have to get advance of approval of Congress and the General Accounting Office for all money transactions.

Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren objected strenuously to this proposal. He sent his assistant, Frank H. Weitzel, to tell the committee the GAO "strongly opposes" elimination of its day-to-day controls on Postoffice spending.

"It's a question whether such absolute power should be surrendered to any department," Weitzel said.

ceptable" alike to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, 1944-48 standard bearer, and Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio).

Taft, however, told newsmen he wasn't pushing anyone for the post, that "9 out of 10 of the names I have heard are acceptable to me."

The Ohioan, who himself is up for reelection, said he thought a wide-open race for the GOP helm might be a good way to get a chairman "not wearing anyone's tag."

Others Are Mentioned

Besides Danaher, Taft specifically mentioned these other possibilities as "acceptable" to himself: State Chairman A. T. Howard of Nebraska, National Committeeman Guy Gabrielson of New Jersey, said to have the support of some prominent Taft supporters on the committee, and Former Representative J. Edgar Chenoweth of Colorado.

Martin, who conferred with Taft during the day, mentioned the same four as "outstanding" possibilities. He added:

"I don't hesitate to say Danaher would be my first choice. If we could get him we would be pretty lucky."

Midwesterners, however, who say the 1950 Senate-Congressional battle royal will turn on the voting on their section of the country, had threatened to put a sharp fight against "Eastern" direction of the committee.

Last night a second "Eastern" possibility took himself out of the race. Sinclair Weeks, Massachusetts national committeeman, said he doesn't want the chairmanship "under any conditions."

Flight Training Plan In Schools Backed

Aviation spokesmen for Government and private industry yesterday urged a Senate District subcommittee to approve a bill to give actual flight training to District high school students.

The bil is opposed by the District Board of Education. Present law permits ground courses in aeronautics in the Washington public schools. The bill would permit flight experience, but not pilot instruction.

Among those who testified for the bill were Maj. Gen. Lucas V. Beau, national commander of the Civil Air Patrol; David Webster, president of the Washington Air Derby Association; Norman B. Ames, professor of engineering at George Washington University; Howard W. Sinclair, chief of the aviation education division of the Civil Aeronautics Administration; Melvin Tyrrell, commander of the National Capital Wing of the Civil Air Patrol.

Also Lieut. Larry H. Farnham, Naval Reserve flier; Robert Sanders, president of the Sanders Aviation, Inc., of Riverdale, Md.; Mrs. Blanche Noyes, president of the International Licensed Women Pilots; Mrs. Perry Robinson, a District high school aviation teacher and member of the Civil Air Patrol; Drew McKillips, 16-year-old Wilson High School student.

School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning stated anew the Board of Education's opposition to the bill. He said the testimony emphasized that students who want flight training can get it through the Civil Air Patrol and said that system is preferable to having the schools undertake flight instruction.

President Inspects 'Armed Guard'

OUT OF THE WEST—President Truman, arriving at National Airport from Chicago yesterday, leans over to inspect the cap pistol 7-year-old Mike Folliard wears in a holster. Mike, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Folliard, 3200 44th st. nw., was there to greet his father, who as White House reporter for The Washington Post had covered the President's speech at the Shrine convention in Chicago

Truman Back After 'Chloe' Wakes Him Up

President Truman returned by plane from Chicago yesterday and said he had an "enjoyable trip" but would "like to get my hands on" the fellow who kept calling for "Chloe."

The reference was to a merrymaker who, with help from other noise makers, kept the President and his party awake most of last night.

The President's plane, the Independence, made the flight from Chicago in two hours and three minutes.

A group of Government officials was on hand to greet the President, but Mr. Truman gave more attention to little Mike Folliard who was there to greet his father, Edward T. Folliard, Washington Post correspondent who covered the Chicago speaking.

Mr. Truman and Mike shook hands and the President examined and admired the cap pistol the boy wore in a holster.

After his chat with Mike and reporters, Mr. Truman went directly to the White House.

Tuesday night was one Mr. Truman probably will long remember.

A band played until after 3 a. m. (EST) in the Stevens Hotel where the President stayed and another band performed in the streets nearby. Shriners were celebrating their diamond jubilee.

Enthusiastic merrymakers tried barber-shop harmony and one lusty-lunged fellow called continually for "Chloe" in the darkness.

Then some firecrackers started popping nearby.

At 5 a. m. the President was out of bed.

Forty-five minutes later, he walked from the hotel with Secret Service men and strode briskly along Michigan ave.

A milkman making his early morning rounds hailed the President from a truck with:

"Hey, Harry, want some good milk? I've got the best milk in Chicago."

The President grinned, then chuckled and waved at the milkman without breaking his stride.

Times-Herald Sold to Tribune

the Washington Times and the Washington Herald from William Randolph Hearst in January, 1939, and merged the two newspapers into a 24-hour daily, willed the paper to seven of its executves.

The seven, all given equal shares, were Shelton, general manager; Waldrop, editor-in-chief; Edmund F. Jewell, advertising director; Michael W. Flynn, supervising managing editor; H. A. Robinson, circulation director; J. Irving Belt, mechanical superintendent, and Mason S. Peters, managing editor.

Mrs. Patterson's only daughter, Mrs. Felicia Gizycka, sought to break the will. Under the terms of the will, Mrs. Gizycka was left a $25,000 annual income, a home on Long Island, and some personal property.

But a surprise out-of-court settlement was reached. The estate was estimated to total some $16,500,000.

The settlement involved a $400,000 lump-sum, tax-paid payment to Mrs. Gizycka. She agreed to that in lieu of the $25,000 a year for life.

The bulk of the amount—$377,500—was to be paid by the seven executives who inherited the Times-Herald. At that time, an attorney estimated that to pay Mrs. Gizycka $400,000 cash, free of heavy Federal and State inheritance and income taxes, would require an actual outlay of $2,500,000.

Mrs. Patterson was a member of a distinguished newspaper family.

Her father, Robert Wilson Patterson, was editor of the Chicago Tribune, which was founded by her maternal grandfather, Joseph Medill.

Her brother, Capt. Joseph Medill Patterson, founded the New York Daily News and was its publisher until his death May 26, 1946.

Mrs. Patterson became editor of the Washington Herald, then owned by Hearst, in 1930. Later she leased the Herald and the Washington Times, also owned by Hearst, with an option to buy both papers. She exercised this option in 1939 and the merger followed.

After the death of her brother, Captain Patterson, Mrs. Patterson served for a time as chairman of the board of directors of the News Syndicate Co., Inc., which publishes the New York Daily News. She also was a director of the Chicago Tribune Co.

Mrs. Patterson's estate included one-fourth interest in the Chicago Tribune, the New York Daily News and other interests of the McCormick-Patterson Trust.

Colonel McCormick is nine days short of his sixty-ninth birthday. He and his cousin Captain Patterson, acquired control of the Chicago Tribune in 1910. After World War I, Captain Patterson went to New York to found the Daily news.

Before Pearl Harbor, the Tribune, the New York Daily News and the Times-Herald followed a common "isolationist" policy.

The Washington Times, forerunner of today's Times-Herald, was born on March 18, 1894, a $1700 project of union printers during a slack employment year.

A few months later, the paper was sold to C. C. Conn, wealthy manufacturer of musical instruments and a member of Congress. Conn traded it the next year to Stilson Hutchins.

Frank Munsey bought the Times from Hutchins in 1901. Ownership passed to the late Arthur Brisbane, Hearst executive, in 1917, and Hearst acquired title the following year.

The Herald was started in 1906 by a group of Washington business and newspapermen. In 1913, it was purchased by Clinton T. Brainard, then president of the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

In 1920, Brainard sold the Herald to a group which included former President Herbert Hoover, Charles, R. Crane, Chicago plumbing magnate and Minister to China, and Julius Barnes, Duluth wheat man.

Hearst purchased the Herald in 1922 and moved it into the Munsey Building with the Times. When the $1,500,000 building at 1317 H st. nw., was finished some years later, both papers were moved there.

For its 24-hour operation, the Times-Herald recently reported circulation of 270,000 daily through Friday, and 229,000 for Saturday. Sunday circulation was reported as 311,000.

Soviet Note on Italy In Pact Is Rejected

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Reporter

A Russian protest against Italy's membership in the North Atlantic alliance was rejected by Secretary of State Acheson yesterday within a few hours after its arrival. He called the Soviet objection "utterly without foundation."

At the same time, Acheson took occasion at a news conference to fire a round of his own in the cold war. He denounced the Communist campaign against the Roman Catholic Church in Czechoslovakia as a violation of the United Nations' pledges to build up and respect human rights and freedoms throughout the world.

Questioned as to what "tensions and conflicts" behind the Iron Curtain President Truman had in mind in his Chicago speech Tuesday, Acheson said he had no comment. But other officials declared the record is clear that religious, political and economic forces are working against absolute Communist control of Russia's satellites in eastern Europe.

On the Pacific front of the cold war, Acheson reaffirmed his opposition to American sponsorship or participation in a pact paralleling the Atlantic Treaty. However, he said his disapproval does not extend to arrangements made by other nations for security organizations for the good of all.

Turning to the strategic Middle East, the Secretary read a prepared statement offering "firm and impartial assistance" to Israel and the Arab states in efforts to settle their remaining differences. The internal stability and economy of both sides have been affected adversely by the recent conflict in Palestine, he said, and an early settlement of outstanding issues "will speed the day" when both the Arabs and Israeli can devote their energies and resources to the restoration of stability.

Acheson noted that the Palestine Conciliation Commission of the U. N. reconvened this week in Lausanne, Switzerland. He said it will expedite matters if both Israeli and Arab delegations return to Lausanne "with full authority to enter into constructive and effective negotiations."

Although war in the Holy Land ended months ago, Israel and some of the Arab states are still at odds over territorial questions and the future of an estimated 800,000 Arabs who fled from the Jewish state.

The Italian question was brought up by a reporter, who asked Acheson what the United States attitude is regarding the Soviet protest announced by the Moscow radio Tuesday night.

The Moscow announcement said notes had been sent to the United States, Britain, France and Italy, protesting that Italy broke the terms of its peace treaty by signing the North Atlantic Pact. Under the peace treaty, the Russian note contended, Italy is pledged to keep its army, navy, air force and war industry within fixed limits and to refrain from joining "any alliances or other groupings pursuing aggressive aims."

Acheson said the Soviet protest, with the exception of one point, appeared to be like all the other Soviet protests against the alliance.

The most familiar aspect of the Russian note is the assumption that the Atlantic Treaty is directed against the Russians, Acheson said. That, he continued, is not so and American and other officials have stated many times that the pact is purely defensive.

The new point that the Russians made, he said, is that Italian participation would violate the peace treaty, which limits Italy's military power and pledges the country not to take any action against any of the nations that signed that treaty.

Acheson recalled that, when Administration officials appeared before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, they specifically declared the Atlantic Treaty is not in conflict with the military clauses of the Italian peace treaty. Therefore, Acheson said, the Russian protest is "utterly without foundation."

Senate Clears Way for Treaty Vote Today

may swing even more votes to the pact.

As the Senate entered a night session to clear eleventh-hour speeches, Senate Administration Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) led off for the proponents with this warning: "The fate of all free men may rest on our vote."

Lucas said Senate repudiation of the pact would "shatter" the Western democracies and "within one year to 18 months, the gates of western Europe would be opened to the hordes of communism." Senate rejection of the treaty, Lucas said, would be "the shortest road to war and bankruptcy."

Graham in Maiden Speech

Earlier, Senator Frank P. Graham (D., N. C.), former president of the University of North Carolina, in his maiden Senate speech announced his intention to vote for the pact.

Graham vigorously denied that the treaty undermines the United Nations. He said that rather it seeks to repair damage to U. N. by Soviet vetoes and should reinforce the world organization through a critical transition period.

Like Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), he said that in voting for the pact he would support "whatever means, moral, economic and military . . . found necessary and wise in the situation to make the pact effective as a collective deterrent to aggression."

He denounced Russia for crushing civil liberties, obstructing the United Nations, and failing to continue the Allied cooperation which won the war and which, he said, could yet win the peace.

Reservations Action First

The first Senate voting today will come on a string of reservations offered by critics of the pact. Most formidable of these is a revised "declaration" introduced yesterday by Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.), and now receiving the pooled support of all pact opponents.

Jointly prepared and backed by Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) and Arthur V. Watkins (R., Utah), the Wherry reservation denies any commitment to supply arms under Article 3 (mutual aid) provisions of the treaty. Wherry said it does not preclude action by Congress to supply arms but denies any obligation to do so, in line with "assurances" treaty proponents have given the Senate.

Schuman Sure of Arms Aid

Paris, July 20 (U.P.).—Foreign Minister Robert Schuman told the cabinet today that he was confident the United States would supply arms aid to western Europe to put teeth into the Atlantic Pact.

Schuman said American aid would be a "natural sequel" to the pact. He added he attached the "highest importance" to President Truman's proposal to Congress for a $1,450,000,000 appropriation to put teeth into the pact.

The foreign affairs committee of the Council of the Republic, corresponding to a Senate, voted 16 to 1 tonight for ratification.

Debate will start in the Chamber of Deputies Friday morning and a vote is expected late Saturday night.

pean continent, appears much less concerned.

It was clear after yesterday's top-level executive and congressional conference, if it hadn't been before, that some legislators' description of the Blair House conference as dealing with matters of long-range policy, rather than any immediate emergeicy, was the correct one.

It is also evident from congressional discussion that it will take many conferences before there can be any final determination.

Opponents of extending further information to Great Britain are already talking about legislation to tie President Truman's hands still further in respect to giving Great Britain any information.

Conferees Emerge Smiling

Some of those who favor giving Great Britain more information are chiefly agitated over whether it should be done by congressional action to amend the law, and if so when.

All of yesterday's conferees emerged smiling from what was literally a smoke-filled committee room. Despite the air-conditioning, the small room back on the third floor of the Capitol had become close and hot, with the windows closed and shades drawn.

McMahon's terse announcement after the session was:

"The Joint Committee on Atomic Energy met with the Secretary of State, the Secretary of National Defense and the Atomic Energy Commission and Gen. Eisenhower.

"We discussed the Nation's foreign relations in the field of atomic energy. No conclusions were reached and none was contemplated at this meeting.

"A future meeting will be held at the call of the chairman after the elapse of sufficient time for further deliberations."

Car Kills Boy; Bus, Auto Hit

was knotted yesterday afternoon by two accidents there.

A three-truck collision in the middle of the span at 2:45 p. m. stalled hundreds of vehicles for more than an hour and destroyed the watchman's shack. The watchman escaped injury by inches.

The wtchman, William G. Clampitt, 62, of 3120 12th st. ne., flagged to a stop a northbound tractor truck and flat-bed trailer loaded with a bulldozer and driven by Otis Barbour, 45, of 1212-A Half st. sw. Clampiitt said he stopped the vehicle to see if the driver had the special permit required for all loads over 15 tons.

To cross from the southbound lane to the northbound lane, to talk to the truck driver, Clampitt found it necessary to flag southbound traffic.

The first south-bound car at that point, a stake body truck driven by H. J. Mertz, 60, Nokesville, Va., stopped in response to Clampitt's signal.

Mertz's truck was rammed from behind by a tractor-trailer driven by Reece Roscoe, 22, Chesterfield County, S. C.

The only apparent injuries were suffered by Mertz. He refused treatment for cuts on the nose and neck and a head bruise.

Roscoe was charged with following another vehicle too closely.

Traffic was resumed after police directed cranes to remove the wrecked truck.

Soon after traffic began rolling again, another pile-up at 4:45 p. m. tied it up for about 20 minutes. A car waiting at the approach to the bridge from the road to National Airport was rammed from behind.

The front car was pushed out into the highway, cutting off traffic to the bridge from the Virginia side. Neither driver was charged, but police said damage amounted to about $150 to each car.

Court Rules Out Mental Tests For Two Garners

The shadow of the electric chair yesterday loomed larger in the lives of George A. and Lawrence J. Garner, brothers and convicted killers.

In District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff refused to order a mental examination for the pair who are to be executed at District Jail July 29.

Their attorney, Louis Jongbloet, contended the brothers are insane now and were insane early in 1948 when they killed Howard Jones, a cab driver, during a holdup.

Jongbloet filed notice he will appeal the ruling and will ask for a stay of execution until the appeal is heard.

Police said the Garners confessed also to the holdup slaying of a second hacker, James Hardy, and that Lawrence Garner, 24, was the triggerman. George Garner is 27.

Senate Votes Unification

tain these main points of the Administration's unification program:

1. Establishment of a single Department of Defense in place of the present National Military Establishment, and reduction of the Departments of Army, Navy, and Air Force from the status of executive departments to military departments.

2. Granting Defense Secretary Johnson clear uathority over the armed forces.

3. Creation of a chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who would be the highest ranking uniformed official of the Government.

4. Put into effect the fiscal reforms of the watered-down House bill.

Differences Noted

Main differences between the two are House provisions that the Defense Secretary must consult with the Senate and House Armed Services Committees before making a major consolidation and establishment of a statutory "right of appeal" to Congress for top officials.

'Decision Made, That Ends It,' Says New D. C. Guard Chief

The new commander of the District National Guard, sworn in yesterday at the Pentagon, made it plain that he's going to be "the boss."

Furthermore, under plans being pushed by Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, the District Guardsmen will have a full-time chief in Brig. Gen William H. Abendroth.

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, the retiring commander, was a part-time soldier, practicing law during the day. Abendroth, it is expected, will be on full-time duty.

The main problem to be worked out between the Pentagon and District Commissioners is where the money will come from to pay the new commanding general's salary.

Abendroth, who was pulled in from outside the District National Guard to stop "feuding" between colonels, received his appointment yesterday with all the pomp that top defense officials could muster.

Secretary Johnson swore him in and pinned his general's stars on the new chief's shoulders. Standing by were Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray, Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews, Secretary of the Air Force W. Stuart Symington, Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan, military aide to President Truman, and Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, chief of the National Guard bureau.

General Cox and Col. Peyton G. Nevitt, adjutant general of the District Guard, also were present.

Afterwards, General Abendroth told reporters he had no plans for a reorganization of the Guard but would wait until "I get my feet on the ground and look over the situation carefully."

"I want to discuss all policies with my senior officers," he said. "But when a decision is made, that ends it."

Abendroth planned to fly to Camp Pendleton, Va., this morning, to meet members of his new command. Units of the Guard now are encamped there for summer training. Either General Cox or Colonel Nevitt will accompany him. They will return Friday.

COL. WILLIAM ABENDROTH
. . . sworn as Guard chief

The new commander would not comment on the plans to make his post a full-time assignment beyond a statement that he "hopes" it will be done.

"I feel it would be better for me to build up my staff by personal selection and not have to take someone's word for a man's value," he added.

Abendroth, a veteran of both World Wars, has served in the Idaho National Guard since 1913. Recently he has been serving on the Army General Staff Committee on National Guard and Reserve Policy as a colonel. He is being relieved of this job. General Cox, District Guard commander since before the war, is retiring for age.

In a farewell order to the National Guard, General Cox last night extended his "heartfelt appreciation" to all hands for their "fine spirit" and cooperation. This, he said, has made possible the "great advances" achieved in the District Guard since he took command 11 years ago.

"The District of Columbia National Guard is at an all-time high," Cox stated. "Splendidly housed, splendidly equipped and with a high degree of morale, its continued success is assured."

He added that is he satisfied that under General Abendroth's leadership, this "growth and improvement" will continue.

Woman Struck by Car Of Princess Elizabeth

London, July 20 (U.P.).—Princess Elizabeth's car knocked down a woman in front of St. Peter's church today just after she had gone in to attend the wedding of Lady Elizabeth Lambert to Mark Longman.

The woman, who was unidentified, was pushed in front of the car by a surging crowd trying to get a glimpse of the princess. The woman was not seriously hurt.

in the military servce who was not entitled to receive such data."

The Washington Post said yesterday that Vaughan is reported to have been handed this "improperly furnished" data by Hunt.

If further evidence developed by the Senate investigators indicates that Generals Waitt and Feldman should neither be court-martialed nor returned to their posts, either officer could be transferred to another assignment or allowed to retire.

Truman Awards Vaughan 'Union Station' Medal

President Truman solemnly decorated Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan with a medal labeled "Operation Union Station" after his explosive military aide's angry brush with reporters here early this month, Newsweek Magazine reported yesterday.

Vaughan, returning from a three-week seagoing cruise July 6, became angry when newsmen and photographers met him at Union Station to quiz him about reported links with Washington's so-called "5 percenters."

Newsweek said that when Vaughan returned to work the following Monday, President Truman—"looking severe"—"fished a pink-ribboned package out of his desk drawer and commanded the general 'front and center.'"

"'In recognition of your courage and intrepidity over and beyond the call of duty,'" the magazine quoted the President as saying. "'I hereby decorate you with the medal Operation Union Station.'"

Mr. Truman pinned the medal on Vaughan's uniform, "saluted snappily and proceeded with his routine staff conference," Newsweek said, adding:

"Vaughan was relieved to get off so easily."

The magazine printed a picture of the "decoration." It was made up of a disc showing a picture of a railroad track against some hills, hanging from a bar bearing the following inscription:

"Operation Union Station.
"Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan,
"U. S. A.
"From President Harry S. Truman."

Tax Collections Show Decline Of 1.4 Billion

The Treasury Department said yesterday tax collections for the year ended June 30 totaled $40,448,498,370, a drop of $1,416,043,923 from the $41,864,542,295 of the preceding 12 months.

New York, as usual, led all States, paying a total of $7,367,802,709. This amount, however, was $607,711,007 less than the State's 1948 Federal tax bill of $7,975,513,716.

The individual income tax collections, including tax withheld by employers, represented the Government's largest single source of revenue—$18,029,145,504 this year compared to $20,997,780,699 in the last 12-month period.

Corporation income and profits taxes were $11,568,383,478 ($10,174,409,833 in the previous year); employment taxes $2,475,980,012 ($2,381,342,352) and miscellaneous internal revenue, $8,374,389,374 ($8,311,009,409).

The totals for other States with previous year's totals in parentheses include:

Maryland (including District of Columbia), $1,068,838,411 ($1,148,315,806); Virginia, $769,884,926 ($768,646,376) and West Virginia, $242,500,251 ($236,727,119).

Average Family Income Rose $400 Last Year

Family income in 1948 rose to to a median of $3320 but only $3000 was left after Federal income taxes, the Government estimated today.

The 1948 level was nearly 14 per cent, or $400, above the 1947 median of $2920, and compared with $2600 in 1946, according to a Federal Reserve Board survey.

Tracing the trend in family income, the study noted that about half of the Natiion's families received higher incomes in 1948 than in 1947, and that the increases were centered in lower income families. About 19 per cent of all families received lower incomes in 1948 than in 1947.

Eleven per cent of the Nation's families received incomes of $1000 or less last year. Many of these were farm families and the board pointed out that farmers often have noncash income such as food from their own crops.

8 Per Cent Over $7500

Incomes of $7500 and over went to 8 per cent of the families, a majority of whom lived in cities.

Higher incomes in the top brackets were attributed mostly to increased wages or salaries on the same job, but one person in five in this group said he made more money by switching to better jobs.

In the lower income brackets, wage increases were attributed mostly to more overtime and steadier work.

The rising trend in incomes closely paralleled the rise in the cost of living since 1946, the board said, indicating there was little change in actual buying power.

Bus Strike Arbitration Proposed by O'Dwyer

New York, July 20 (U.P.)—Mayor William O'Dwyer proposed today that the city's seven-day-old bus strike be called off at once and the dispute submitted to arbitration.

Michael J. Quill, president of the CIO Transport Workers Union, said the strikers would vote on the proposal tomorrow. The company agreed to give its reply at the earliest possible moment.

The mayor's proposal urged that the transit situation be returned to the status of July 6, the date on which four company mechanics were laid off, an action which led to the strike.

State Department Still Hopes for Mexican Oil Loan

Despite collapse of negotiations for an oil loan to Mexico, Assistant Secretary of State Edward G. Miller, jr., said yesterday, this Government still hopes some loan arrangement can be made.

Miller noted, however, that such financial assistance could extend only to construction of refining, transport, and oil distribution facilities in Mexico.

He said it is long-established Government policy that public funds should not be used to develop foreign petroleum fields.

It is the United States' view, he said, that adequate sources of private capital are available at reasonable terms for oil development operations.

On Tuesday, the United States and Mexico announced the suspension of negotiations for an oil loan in which Mexico reportedly sought 203 million dollars.

The Washington Post reported yesterday that the Export-Import Bank's position on any such loan is that Mexico's oil lands should be opened to private capital for exploration and development purposes.

The loan sought by Mexico would have been for Pemex, Mexican government oil monopoly, and it is now clear that the official reason for the breakdown of the loan talks was American refusal to permit use of funds to Pemex for development work.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Miller both said yesterday that they have no knowledge that any intercession for the Mexican loan was made by Edwin W. Pauley, close friend of President Truman.

Pauley is a leader of a group of independent oilmen who have contracted with Pemex to explore oil fields in Mexico. Charles Hill, a Denver oil man, charged in a talk here Tuesday that if the Mexican oil loan went through it would be in payment of a "political debt" to Pauley, former Democratic national committeeman.

Pauley, in a telephone conversation yesterday with the New York Herald Tribune from his Los Angeles office, flatly denied any part in the Mexican loan negotiations.

"I have not, I don't intend to, I have no reason to" become involved in such matters, he declared, saying the loan has absolutely no effect on his contract.

Loyalty Strait Jacket

A most mischievous precedent would be established by the rider which Senator O'Mahoney intends to propose to the independent offices appropriations bill due soon for consideration by the Senate. The Senator's proposal, in part, is as follows:

> No part of any appropriation contained in this title for the Atomic Energy Commission shall be used to confer a fellowship on any person who advocates or who is a member of an organization or party that advocates the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence or with respect to whom the Attorney General finds, upon investigation and report by the Federal Bureau of Investigation on the character, associations, and loyalty of whom, that reasonable grounds exist for belief that such person is disloyal to the Government of the United States.

The first part of this extraordinary amendment means that recipients of atomic fellowships would be treated as though they were employes of the Federal Government. They are not. They are merely beneficiaries of a scholarship program designed to foster education in science. Their fellowships afford them no access whatever to classified atomic information. They no more affect the security of the country than veterans who are helped to get an education under the GI Bill of Rights, and there is no more reason why they should be subjected to a political test. It will be time enough to weed out the subversives when and if the holders of atomic energy fellowships apply for work in the atomic energy program.

The second part of the O'Mahoney rider, if one succeeds in parsing it, means that the Attorney General could exercise an absolute and unchecked control over the award of atomic energy fellowships. His qualifications for such authority are obscure, since he is neither a scientist nor an educator. The fellowships are awarded at present on a strictly merit basis in accordance with recommendations by the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences. Final authority rests with the Atomic Energy Commission. Several times we have said that this is not the appropriate agency for such a purpose. Congress has the opportunity to place the scholarships where they belong by passing the long-needed bill setting up a national science foundation. But in any event, to give the Attorney General a veto power over those scholarships is about as sensible as to give him a veto over the selection of personnel employed by congressional committees. There is no place in the American system for a lord high commissioner of loyalty.

Nearing Unification

President Truman's canny stratagem to force action in Congress on the Tydings bill to strengthen unification has borne fruit. Under pressure of the military reorganization order submitted by the President, the Senate has rescued the House Armed Services Committee from the knot in which that body had tied itself when it tabled the Tydings bill. At the instance of the Armed Services Committee, the House passed the substitute Short bill, which embodied an important fiscal reform section of the Tydings bill. Now the Senate also has passed the Short bill, but has tacked on all the provisions of the Tydings bill as that measure passed the upper house. In other words, a clever parliamentary maneuver has kept the initiative for defense reorganization in Congress, for it now will be possible for House conferees to agree and the House to vote on the Tydings bill despite the blunder of the Armed Services Committee.

The committee got into the snarl originally by allowing the Tydings bill to be confused with the pending B-36 investigation.

Part of the confusion of aims which befuddled the committee was demonstrated by Representative Short's attack on what he termed a "ridiculous editorial" in this newspaper. Mr. Short takes the position that it is unwise to increase the powers of the Secretary of Defense just before Secretary Johnson is to be investigated in the B-36 probe. Mr. Short talks as if the investigation were to be directed against Secretary Johnson rather than toward shedding light on B-36 contracts. Moreover, it seems to us, Mr. Short falls into the error of looking at the man rather than the office.

Secretary Johnson has not always handled himself in a way to inspire the confidence of Congress, and certainly his recent directive on coordinated testimony for the investigation was a tactical mistake even though we are convinced that the purpose was innocuous. But the aim of the Tydings bill is not to give Secretary Johnson as a person more power, but to enable the Secretary of Defense, whoever he may be, to obtain a better defense for less money. What success Mr. Johnson has had so far under his general authority has depended largely on the backing of the President, and surely this is a flimsy reed for so important an undertaking. Actually, in giving the Secretary of Defense specific powers to do his job, Congress also will be limiting any possible abuse of the Secretary's position.

Voting On The Pact

Testimony that the President is right in saying that the American people are "overwhelmingly" back of the North Atlantic Security Pact is ample. The latest piece of evidence to come our way is contained in the communication of Admiral Zacharias, now one of the Nation's popular lecturers, on the page opposite. The people, with the common sense which Theodore Roosevelt always said was his great reliance, are convinced by both the lessons of two devastating wars and the facts of this attenuated world that the real safeguard of peace is a clear and unmistakable declaration of intention to stop aggression in its tracks.

This is the pledge that the members of the United Nations undertook when they signed the Charter in those hopeful spring days of 1945 in San Francisco. To hear some of the debaters in the Senate, however, one would think that this pledge is nonexistent. But it is still there in the bond. The need for renewing this solemn oath through the Atlantic Pact arises from the way in which the United Nations has been thwarted by Soviet Russia. This is abundantly clear in the record. Therefore, the nations abutting upon the Atlantic, taking advantage of Article 51, which was framed to take care of the contingency that the peace organization might be undermined by the disloyalty of one of the big powers, proposed to band together for their separate and joint protection in case of aggression. The result is the Atlantic Pact. An attack on one would be an attack on all, and the common defense is to be organized not only to cope with such an assault upon peace, but, more importantly, to frustrate it.

It is on this aspect of the pact that most of the debate in the Senate has centered. Does the Atlantic Pact imply a legal or a moral obligation to send arms from one ally to another? In any sensible view such an obligation is inherent in both the pact and the diplomatic history of the pact. But that does not mean that any particular arms program would be approved by an affirmative vote for the pact, or that the United States would have nothing to say on ways and means and conditions. The defense committee of the signatory powers, including the United States, is to be set up under Article 9 to work out a system of mutual aid, and no decision could be taken without the consent of all parties. In addition, Congress after the pact has been ratified, would still be left to pass upon the method and the extent of the military aid that is proposed.

However, Administration spokesmen have been so disingenuous on this tieup that a Republican group has insisted on a reservation that the pact shall be divorced from an armament obligation. We deprecate this negative approach in a harassed world crying out for affirmative leadership, though we understand the reason for it. In the circumstances the submission of the reservation is understandable and even if it were passed, there would be no limitation on the preparation of the Atlantic defense organization provided for under the pact. Nor would there be, as Senator Wherry has said, any formal or implied deterrent in the reservation to the export of arms to the signatory powers, though, of course, Congress would first have to act on any contemplated consignment. Indeed, the House is all set to begin consideration of American aid.

In any event the Senate will be able this afternoon to make its yes to the pact resounding. This is of prime importance—to show the masters of Moscow that the United States has a foreign policy so firm that they (and our allies) will be absolutely sure that the American people will fight for it. When aggressors are abroad, the price of peace is the willingness to defend it, and history has shown that all aggressors start wars on the basis of a miscalculation of opposing forces. The Atlantic Pact is intended as a clarion warning of the overwhelming forces against which an aggressor would find himself ranged. It is therefore bound to keep the peace.

Overtime On Overtime

More than a year has passed since the Supreme Court handed down its so-called overtime-on-overtime decision. This case grew out of claims for back pay brought by a number of New York dockworkers. The court held that premium payments for work done on Saturday afternoons, Sundays, and holidays were not overtime rates in the legally accepted sense of the word but payments for working at undesirable hours. As a result, it concluded that these premium rates must be included in computing regular wage rates, which constitute the basis for determining the rate of pay for work in excess of 40 hours per week. The effect of this overtime-on-overtime ruling was to validate claims for back pay that stevedoring companies claimed would ruin them, even though the Portal-to-Portal Pay Act set up certain "good faith" defenses against such claims that would have protected the industry to some extent. That act, it will be recalled, was passed to rescue the victims of the Supreme Court's decision in the portal-to-portal cases.

A futile attempt to persuade the Supreme Court to rehear the overtime-on-overtime case was backed by both employers and the AFL, the latter fearing that the decision would result in throwing out highly advantageous wage contracts providing for week-end premium payments. Since then efforts have been concentrated on remedial legislative action, assured by passage of a bill signed yesterday by the President prohibiting payment of overtime-on-overtime to all employes coming under the Fair Labor Standards Act, and retroactively outlawing pending claims for back pay.

It is unfortunate that Congress has had to rely on this kind of declaratory legislation invalidating claims that the highest court of the land has upheld. The difficulty lies partly in the obscurities of the Fair Labor Standards Act and partly in the strained and unrealistic interpretations of its meaning by the Supreme Court. Congress has chosen the lesser of two evils. Enactment of this remedial measure will benefit not only employers but labor, too, since bankrupt industries are in no position to provide jobs for workers.

Thomas and Barden

What appeared to be a great victory for Federal aid to education a few weeks ago is now fast slipping toward disaster. Hostile groups sponsoring rival bills have aroused such intense feelings over relatively minor differences that there is grave danger of losing the enormous advantage that these bills would give to the cause of education. The situation certainly demands calm reappraisal by the men who are primarily devoted to the improvement of education.

It is true, of course, that the controversy skirts along the edge of a basic principle. Some groups are supporting the Thomas bill passed by the Senate although it would permit a few States to use small portions of the 300 million dollars authorized in aid of education to provide free textbooks and bus service to children attending private sectarian schools. Supporters of the Barden bill, on the other hand, prefer it because it would reserve the funds in question solely for "public elementary and secondary schools." No funds would be available under it for textbooks or bus service in either public or sectarian schools. The questions thus raised are offshoots from the larger issue of separation of church and state. But at no point is that vital issue reached, and the narrow subject of controversy is utterly insignificant beside the great importance of buttressing our educational systems with Federal funds without interfering with those systems.

If Congress were appropriating funds that would have to be passed on directly to sectarian schools for textbooks and bus service, or if permission for the States to use Federal funds for these purposes could be regarded as an opening wedge for wider public support of such schools, the issue would be entirely different. Actually, however, both bills are founded on the bedrock of separation of church and state, as well as States' rights. The Supreme Court has ruled out any possibility of direct appropriation of tax funds for private sectarian schools. At most, acceptance of the Senate bill could mean only a driblet of Federal funds for bus service and textbooks for parochial schools so long as that policy has the approval of certain State Legislatures and is not upset on constitutional grounds by the Supreme Court. We can see no sacrifice of the separation-of-church-and-state principle, therefore, in acceptance of the Thomas bill.

The Thomas bill has the additional advantage of having passed the Senate. There are, to be sure, some very desirable features in the Barden bill, notably the provision having the payments in aid of education made by the Treasury rather than by the Commissioner of Education, who would be relied upon to certify the amount due each State. This would provide one more safeguard against Federal domination. Representative Barden may well press for this amendment, but his restrained and statesmanlike attitude under recent unwarranted attacks by the Catholic hierarchy suggest that he will not undercut the victory that is now within his grasp by insisting on his own particular formula for protection of these funds against sectarian use.

Representative Sims is so concerned over the fate of the bill that he has introduced a petition to discharge the House Education and Labor Committee from further consideration of it. We doubt that this drastic move will be necessary. A majority of the House committee knows that Federal aid to education is essential for equipping the citizens of tomorrow to meet the weighty responsibility that has fallen upon these United States. The people expect the committee members to do their duty in spite of petty bickering, pin-point arguments, and thoughtless name-calling, and we still have confidence that they will rise to the occasion.

LULLABY

Hush, I will hold you as you cry,
Cradled in comfort in my arm—
Soon will the world be painless, free
Of fright and harm.

Hush, I can feel the pangs you feel
Lashing like waves on a wind-blown sea—
Watch how the whitecap moments calm,
So placidly.

Hush, this is not the wide world's weather,
Child who must cry the clock around—
Soon will this transient storm be stilled
And peace be found.

Hush, all these marks of sorrow scratched,
Marring your jewels, day and night,
Never will scar your later gems
Of pure delight.

Would that this world of pain and hate
Could nestle again at the bosom of earth—
Then would the dreams of man be eased
Through cries at birth.

Keynes Distorted

During the twentieth century, it looks as though we may see a curious repetition of one of the most notorious errors of the nineteenth. Today men are distorting the economic doctrines of John Maynard Keynes in a way which is likely to lead to much waste; then, there was similar distortion of the doctrines of Adam Smith.

Keynesian doctrines, under certain circumstances, justify deficit financing. But the experience of the last several years would suggest that once the reverence for a balanced budget is lost, the qualifying phrase "under certain circumstances" tends to be forgotten.

Expenditures of all sorts are desirable in and of themselves; there is no particular criterion for rejecting so and indulging in others; popularity is achieved by spending, not by saving. So in periods of full or relatively full employment, governmental policies, as a result of Keynes' influence, may lead to the substantial waste of manpower and through increased taxation to the discouragement of initiative.

How is this problem to be met? It would seem that it is an issue to which liberal and conservative statesmen alike should address themselves. Could not an investigatory committee or group on the best methods to avoid the abuse of deficit financing be established? This is not, of course, an economic but a political question.

One suggestion, with obvious imperfections, may be made. A constitutional amendment could be submitted specifying the circumstances (substantially less than full employment as measured by certain indices and a military emergency, presumably) when deficit financing is permitted. It could be forbidden at other periods; and legislators and members of the executive branch responsible for violating such a provision could be deprived of their salaries at the suit of any taxpayer or group of taxpayers. One evident difficulty with such a suggestion is the complexity which the amendment would necessarily have.

Welfare State

The July 15 communication of Nelson H. Cruikshank, director of social insurance activities of the AFL, is more political propaganda than valid pleading for Mr. Truman's welfare state.

The Cruikshank manifesto had a double purpose: It subtly implied that former Secretary of State Byrnes was a reactionary hostile to organized labor and it adduced historical proof that Mr. Truman's particular brand of welfare state would be the people's servant and not their despotic master. Mr. Byrnes could refute the charges of disloyalty to labor by asking Mr. Cruishank to read the majority Supreme Court opinion he delivered in the teamsters' union case (Nos. 131-132.-October Term, 1941).

There is no intelligent opposition to a welfare state that truly is the faithful servant of all the people. Such a welfare state provides collective security through maximal production, fair distribution and dependable guarantees that superior performance and industry will win compensatory rewards. Communism claims to be such a welfare state. But sensible realists are just as afraid of an improvident dictatorship of irresponsible labor leaders as they are of an atheistic distatorship of an enslaved proletariat.

Mr. Cruikshank cites our tragic housing shortage and urgent need of dependable, low-cost health security as justification for Mr. Truman's kind of a welfare state. Through strikes, slowdowns, featherbedding and demands for higher wages for less production during shorter working hours, selfish labor leaders have sabotaged our housing program.

Mr. Cruikshank has repeatedly testified in behalf of the Administration's all-encompassing, compulsory health insurance program. This system of compulsory health insurance was imposed upon British doctors and dentists by England's socialistic labor government. It was officially reported that a Scotch dentist working long hours, seven days a week earned over $100,000. But after taxes the industrious, enterprising dentist had less than $10,000 take-home pay for his year of virtual slavery. One dollar for the dentist-worker, $9 for the benevolent master.

Transit Radio

I can speak for three adults in our family who will habitually pass up a non-radio streetcar and wait for the ones with the soothing music. Then the women with their inane gossip can't be heard so plainly, and the usually grouchy, longfaced men have a smile on their face. Your feet don't hurt as before (if you are standing) because they are mentally waltzing.

So please don't let the chronic soreheads sway anyone's good judgment—and the judgment was good that caused the installation of radios.

Overcoming Prejudice

Recently you published a letter from a local man who, although intellectually convinced that segregation is wrong, yet finds himself unable emotionally to associate with Negroes. Since he sounded like a sincere man, not the stereotyped figure of a "bigot," perhaps he would appreciate a serious suggestion.

It is understandable that Southerners should have prejudice; it is inexcusable to sit back and nurse such feelings. Because of my own experience, I suggest that prejudice can be dulled by deliberate association with colored people until the feeling of revulsion gives away to acceptance.

At the age of 19 (after a Georgia childhood) I attended a Northern summer school and was flabbergasted (as only a Southerner can be) to find that two fat Jamaican Negro girls were in my class. I have to laugh at myself now, but I was really upset at the time. At least, I had the grace to feel ashamed of my reaction to two perfectly harmless girls, and I decided to try to overcome my emotions.

On moving to Washington, I deliberately sat next to colored people on the streetcar, until I could do so without minding it. Then I attended a picnic where I ate next to a colored girl. It was hard, but before the end of the picnic I'd begun to relax and enjoy the fun. (Giving way to my prejudice would have spoiled things for both of us, wouldn't it?)

A stint of teaching in nonsegregated nursery schools out West showed me that colored children are as engaging as any in the world and my last feeling of prejudice withered away from disuse.

Southern prejudice arises from childhood conditioning. It's never too late to recondition ourselves, to the benefit of all.

Atlantic Contingent

You made an excellent point in your editorial on the Atlantic Pact of July 14, "We Must Buy Peace," when you said: "A declaration of intent had much better be pinned on Article 9, and read that only a collective military establishment will be munitioned under the Atlantic Pact"—that this would promote "the development of a real unity of the Atlantic community."

A resolution leading toward this very goal was introduced on July 8 by 11 Senators, asking that part of the proposed United States military aid be earmarked to help establish a truly international armed force for the Atlantic Pact nations as a whole. Such an Atlantic contingent, the resolution suggested, would be composed of volunteers from the smaller nations which cannot maintain effective military establishments of their own. It would be controlled directly by the defense committee provided in Article 9 of the pact.

The advantages of such a force are obvious. It would serve as a professional, highly-trained force in being, which would be ready to move, without the necessity of prolonged parliamentary debates in any country, should aggression occur against a pact member. Naturally, this Atlantic contingent would not be large enough to repel alone an onslaught from Soviet Russia. But it would be a dependable emergency defense force for the smaller nations, an auxiliary force for the larger nations, and a symbol of the united determination of the Atlantic Pact nations, as a collective entity, to resist aggression.

The objections now being raised in the Senate that the military aid bill could serve to give colonial nations like the Netherlands more arms to keep their possessions in line, or that some recipients might turn Communist and use the arms we give them against us in case of war, would be overcome by the Atlantic contingent proposal. The criticism that we will have no control over what is done with our military loans and lend-lease would also lose validity, since the United States, as a member of the defense committee, would participate in the control of the Atlantic contingent.

This proposed Atlantic contingent, as a common possession of the Atlantic nations, would be as strong an incentive to the development of unity in the Atlantic community as the common heritage of the Western territories was an incentive to the development of unity among our 13 original States. It would also serve as the nucleus of an international police force, which, like the pact itself, could be extended to cover all peace-desiring nations in the world, until such time as the United Nations itself is willing and able to take over the job of maintaining international peace and security.

Senator Taft stated that he was in "great sympathy" with this proposal. So are many other Senators in addition to the 11 sponsors. It is to be hoped that by the time the miliary aid bill is introduced, this idea will have gained sufficient support to give a positive, constructive direction to our present defensive foreign policy.

Friction With Britain

THE NEWS photograph shows marchers in England bearing placards that read: "Homes for Britons, not barracks for Yanks." These are some of the noisy extremists who would like to break up the postwar friendship between Britain and the United States.

On both sides of the Atlantic are articulate minorities seeking to cause as much friction as possible. The Communist strategy behind the anti-American demonstration is obvious.

The fact that the two countries have been able to cooperate to the extent that today United States bombers are based in England is galling to the Soviet Union. So long as the protest against "Yankee imperialism" is confined to Britain's small Communist fringe it is unimportant. As reflected in the left wing of the Labor Party it is a more serious phenomenon.

On the extreme right is another small minority with a resentment of America's economic power from quite a different motivation. It goes back to the school of empire self-sufficiency which was led at one time by Lord Beaverbrook, the publishing tycoon. Much of the resistance to the push from the Economic Cooperation Administration for greater unity of the European economy has come from this source.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

An Unfortunate Speech

GOVERNOR Dewey's remarks on the Marshall Plan are not, it seems to me, as well considered as they should have been. Mr. Dewey is threatening the British people with the loss of Marshall Plan money because the Labor government is "resisting the economic unity without which I do not believe Europe can survive." He believes that the Labor Party is resisting because of its "pet projects of socialism or nationalism."

Lippmann

EVEN IF we believe, as I for one do, that a planned economy of the British type is almost impossible to integrate with a reasonably free world economy, Mr. Dewey's remarks are nonetheless unfortunate. They would, if they are generally supported over here, make the United States the issue in the coming British election. They amount to telling the British people that unless they turn out the Labor government and put in a Conservative government, they will, if the titular head of the Republican Party is followed here, be deprived of Marshall aid money. I wonder whether Mr. Dewey, if he thinks it over, will wish to inject such an issue into the British election. Does he want the electoral campaign to be fought not on the results of the Labor government's policy but on the question of whether the right of the British to choose their own government is for sale to the United States?

Proud and self-respecting nations do not take well to the kind of intervention in affairs which Mr. Dewey advocates. Nothing but mischief can come of threats and of acts over here which would make it appear, which would make it possible to argue, that the Conservatives are the American party and that Labor is the anti-American party.

AND TO the Communists everywhere Mr. Dewey will have furnished gratis support for their propaganda against the Marshall Plan. Have they not been saying from the beginning that the Marshall Plan would deprive the European nations of their independence? If responsible Americans are now going to demand that a British government be turned out on the threat of hunger and unemployment, it will not be easy to convince the Socialist masses of the European continent that our motives are as disinterested and as constructive as, thus far, they have undoubtedly been.

NATURALLY, I do not think myself that Mr. Dewey has made up his mind to use the Marshall Plan to defeat the Labor government. No doubt he is quite sincere and earnest, and in principle right, when he argues for the unification of Europe, when he says that Socialist planning is nationalistic and an obstacle to unification. But it is also quite plain from his own speech that he has not examined the problem of unification very closely.

Thus he speaks about making "western Europe into one large area for the free exchange of goods and services like the United States." Let Mr. Dewey name the countries which belong to "western Europe." I suppose he would include western Germany up to the Elbe River. If he will then study this "area," he will soon discover that it in no way resembles the United States. For unlike the United States it does not contain the farmlands to feed itself or the main raw materials for its industries.

"Western Europe," unlike the United States, is not a balanced and approximately self-sufficient economic area. It is dependent upon imports for which it must pay with the exports of its industry. If the United States were limited to the area north of the Ohio River and east of the Mississippi, if all the South and all the West were foreign territory, the situation would be something like "western Europe."

THE UNIFICATION of western Europe as such is a political expedient against the threat of Soviet aggression. It is not a serious project for the reconstruction of a solvent and prosperous economy. Mr. Dewey will find when he pursues his inquiry that "while Mr. Churchill is the eloquent advocate of political unity in the whole of Europe up to the Soviet border," the Conservative Party has no more intention than has the Labor Party of making an economic union with the western part of Europe.

For an economic union, if it is to be successful, must unite countries that are complementary. The two leading industrial nations of western Europe, the British and the German, are not complementary. The United Kingdom with its 50 million people has for its factories one important natural resource—coal. Western Germany with its 50 million Germans has for its factories one important natural resource—coal. They are not partners but within western Europe as such they are rivals. Each requires the same kinds of imports, each offers the same kinds of exports. They could be brought together only in an area which was economically much more diversified than is western Europe. That may not happen in our time. It certainly will not happen as long as the European continent is partitioned and in a state of cold war.

THE CRISIS which is mounting in Britain and the sterling area will affect the whole free world, including this country. Let us not aggravate and embitter it by threats that can only provoke fierce passions on both sides of the Atlantic, without bringing us any nearer to an understanding of the depth and gravity of the problem itself.

A Communication

Psychological Angle In The Atlantic Pact

By Ellis M. Zacharias

Rear Admiral, U. S. N. (Retired)

THE PRINCIPAL factor in the questions of the Atlantic Pact and the arming of Europe is largely one of a psychological nature. This appears to have been completely overlooked not only by the State Department but also by members of Congress.

I happen to know, as a result of two Nation-wide lecture tours, that the people of the United States do not have the slightest idea of the implications of these two vital questions. I realize that the purpose of the debates in Congress is to bring out all the facts so that the people can decide what they desire to be done. But when such debates have the effect of destroying utterly the intangible and most important effect of international agreements, it is time that they be limited or stopped.

For the past three years, I have told my audiences that "war is neither imminent or inevitable." This was being said at a time when many of our columnists and commentators insisted war was "just around the corner." It was said at a time when certain groups, without presenting facts to bolster their assertions, were putting out propaganda which, we are informed, almost caused a national mobilization in April, 1948.

At the time, these ill-advised and unwarranted pronouncements led me to believe that they were being fostered by groups with selfish interests, in order to bring about changes in our national defense setup which was not only unnecessary but highly prejudicial to our future security. Since then, the utter falsity of their claims has been exposed. But we have not seen the end of such tactics. They still prevail in almost daily efforts to stultify the effectiveness of unselfish efforts in behalf of our national defense.

THE PURPOSE of the Atlantic Pact was and is to "contain" Russia and the satellite states, and to remove any illusions on the part of the Russians that they could start another war and be successful in it. Particularly, it was to convince Russia that she could not wage successfully a "hot" war in Europe because she would have to fight the United States, and that now, and for many years to come, Russia cannot defeat the United States.

The nations of Europe who signed the Atlantic Pact did so after weighing the benefits and dangers. It was natural for them to desire that sufficient arms be furnished to enable them to put up a normal resistance at their borders. They remember the hardships and suffering incurred in the last war when their countries were readily overrun by the Axis. They do not look forward to another "liberation" of their countries.

However, the relationship of a valiant defense to a successful defense, and all that this entails, must also be considered realistically. Western Europe feels that, collectively, 60 fully armed divisions would delay the Russians at the Rhine. General Bradley, on the other hand, has stated even 25 divisions would not begin to serve the purpose, and that these 25 divisions could not be furnished without seriously disrupting our peacetime economy.

In other words, "arms to Europe" would be a futile gesture with costs which would seriously hamper, if not cripple, our more effective efforts in other directions, namely, economic and political rehabilitation of Europe. The question of military rehabilitation of Europe, therefore, takes third place in order of importance.

FROM THE above, it is evident that the question of preventing another war in Europe does not depend upon the amount of arms that we are able to furnish to Europe for military rehabilitation. Any decision of Russia to move on Europe in a military way will not be affected in the slightest by the number of troops she might lose in the opening phases of another war.

The men of Moscow are very astute and they realize that it would be suicide to start a war in which the principal opponent cannot be defeated. They know that the Atlantic Pact assures for them the loss of the war before it is started, because the United States is committed to come to the aid of any signatory who is attacked by an aggressor. The degree of defense which can be offered initially by the state attacked is beside the point, and will not act as a deterrent to Russia in such a vital decision—once they make the decision to move.

It would be most unfortunate for the United States and the world if members of Congress, in their debates, allowed domestic political considerations to enter into their expressions. Even though they feel that the Atlantic Pact is inextricably involved in the question of supplying arms to Europe, they are not justified in nullifying the one weapon which, in itself, is sufficient to dissuade Russia from attempting to overrun the territory of a signatory—namely, the psychological benefit of the Atlantic Pact.

It seems a little naive, in a political year, to emphasize that a statement to the Scandinavian countries by our State Department to the effect that the United States would supply arms only to "countries associated with us in collective defense arrangements" can or should be construed as meaning that we have been obligated to an extent beyond our capacity.

Likewise, it is the worst kind of specious argument to read into the provisions of the pact something which is not there. I refer to the section which says: "In order more effectively to achieve the objectives of this treaty, the parties, separately and jointly, by means of continuous and effective self-help and mutual aid, will maintain and develop their individual and collective capacity to resist armed attack." The "mutual aid" which carries no specific obligations is further safeguarded by the treaty which provides for a special defense committee whose recommendations must of course have the consent of our representative.

SUCH contentions by men who are supposed to guide the destinies of this country will have an immediately adverse and lasting effect upon our capacity of leadership in world affairs which has been thrust upon us. The arguments could not have been prepared better in Moscow.

Three months before the Battle of Midway, I addressed a lengthy memorandum to Admiral Nimitz, then Commander in Chief of the Pacific Fleet (this memo was one of those turned over to the congressional committee by the Navy Department for use in the investigation of Pearl Harbor). In this memorandum I stated that the security situation in Hawaii, from extensive observations I was able to make, was an open invitation to the Japanese to come back for another try, and this time they would come in such force as to make a successful landing certain.

Three months later they came back in such force and the Battle of Midway resulted. It was the valiant work of our Naval aviators exclusively, and particularly the indescribable courage of our torpedo plane pilots which won for us this battle and turned the course of the war in the Pacific.

The reintroduction of this incident is for the sole purpose of emphasizing that there are certain psychological factors which largely determine the decision of any enemy whether or not to strike. A similar situation exists today in our efforts to persuade Russia that it would be most inadvisable for her to take aggressive action in a military way against any of the signatories of the Atlantic Pact.

WHAT ARE we to do about it? As I have indicated, I feel very strongly that the only approach to a solution in attempts to make Russia realistic about not starting military aggression is through a proper understanding of our future intentions. This understanding can be brought about only through proper psychological action on our part. Of course, we have the "Voice of America." I have been consistently critical of this most potential instrument because its radio work has consisted mainly of news broadcasts and official statements. They do not have the psychological content which we should be pouring out to the Russians and to the satellite states day after day.

This is urgently necessary if only to counteract the erroneous impressions and misunderstandings generated by the utterances of some of our leaders who should have a proper realization of the weight given in foreign countries to their remarks. In my book Secret Missions I, pointed out specifically the effectiveness of proper techniques of psychological warfare, both against the German submarine personnel and against the Japanese high command—in the latter case crystalize the Japanese decision to surrender even before the first atomic bomb was dropped on Hiroshima.

We have an identical situation today. To impress the Russians properly we must employ the technique of constant and forceful repetition. And, finally, this effort should be supported in Congress by careful omission of those statements which are most welcome in Moscow. The Russians are firm believers in the well-known technique, "give them enough rope and they well hang themselves." That will be the result if we allow ill-considered debate over the question of arms to Europe to hamper the decisive ratification of the Atlantic Pact.

News Conference Today

President Truman will hold his weekly news conference at 10:30 a. m. today.

Keep Wartime Plants Going, South Advised

The South should do everything possible to keep in operation the 296 industrial plants built there during the war, a National Planning Association report said yesterday.

Such a move, it held, will help raise the standard of living below the Mason-Dixon Line.

The report was drafted by a 56-member "Committee of the South," organized as part of the planning association, which is a private organization devoted to planning in business, agriculture, labor and other fields.

The report indicated that immediate development of the surplus plants is handicapped by the Government's 15-month-old "freeze" of disposals.

64 Plants Held Idle

The freeze, dictated by international tensions, is preventing the sale or lease to private industry of 64 Southern ordnance, chemical, oil, shipbuilding and other plants. They are kept in stand-by condition ready for war use if necessary.

However, the Committee of the South noted that 44 complete plants and parts of two others have been declared wholly surplus. It suggested that "multiple tenancy"—the use of a single large plant by several small businesses—may be the most fruitful means of bringing them into production.

The report, second in a series on the Southern economy issued under NPA sponsorship, showed that the Government's wartime plant program contributed measurably to the South's industrial capacity. But more important, it suggested, was this "intangible" gain:

"The wartime experience showed many Southern communities that industrialization was possible . . .

Need for Better Schools Shown

"It demonstrated the need for civic improvements, better government, and better schools. It demonstrated the abilities of Southern labor and management.

"After the war was over, it led to vigorous community action aimed at retaining those benefits.

"That action may eventually enable the population of the Southern States to achieve the standard of living that is possible with a full utilization of their resources."

Although the Government made a relatively heavier investment in the South than the other areas, more than half of it was in explosives and chemical lines, which do not lend themselves readily to conversion for civilian use.

Perhaps Gain Only Average

Making allowance for this, it was stated, there is a question whether the South showed a larger gain in manufacturing potential during the war then did the Nation.

"This very fact makes it all the more important that the South maintain in operation as much as possible of its wartime increase in industrial capacity," the report said.

The survey was written by Frederick L. Deming, assistant vice president, and Weldof A. Stein, industrial economist, of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis. They were aided by members of the committee, made up of Southern industrialists, farm and union officials, educators, journalists and others.

British Trade Balance Dips

London, July 20 (AP).—Britain's international trade went another £54,200,000 ($216,800,000) in the hole in June—deeper than at any time in 21 months.

Exports were high, but imports hit a new record and vital dollar shipments to America slumped.

The Board of Trade gave this bad news today in its final, detailed trade report for June.

The board said that last month the gap between exports and imports was the biggest since September, 1947.

Imports hit £201,700,000 ($806,800,000), a record. That was £6,900,000 ($27,600,000) above the previous high reached in May.

Exports were £143,100,000 ($572,400,000), reexports were £4,400,000 ($17,600,000).

Shipments of liquor to the United States were £861,000 ($3,444,000), or £52,000 ($208,000) above the monthly average for the first 1949 quarter.

Other exports to the United States dropped off. New cars were down to £59,000 ($236,000) from a first-quarter average of £205,000 ($820,000).

Zoning Board Rejects Plea By O'Boyle

A petition by Catholic Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle for modification of the zoning laws to permit erection of a three-story school and convent at Highview pl. and Brothers pl. se., was denied yesterday by the Board of Zoning Adjustment.

The board decided that evidence was insufficient to warrant an exception to regulations limiting the height of buildings in the area to 40 feet.

The petition presented by Attorney Ralph A. Cusick and Dennis Madden of the architects' firm of Ross and Walton, asked the board to allow construction of a 47-foot high building.

School Designed for 500

The school and convent which were to be built at a cost of $350,000 adjoining the Church of the Assumption, were designed to accommodate 500 children in the school and nine nuns in the convent.

The board also denied a request by Morris S. Fox to build two semidetached houses at Walnut and Laurel sts. nw., in an area restricted to detached homes.

Eleven residents appeared at the hearing to protest any change in zoning regulations, declaring that the proposed buildings would detract from the neighborhood and depreciate other properties.

The board granted the petition of the District Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution to add a picture window and remodel an annex to the chapter house in the rear of 1732 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Other Actions Listed

Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, president of the D. C. Chapter House Corp., told the board the Daughters planned to turn the building into an office and a meeting room where they might serve "a cookie and a cup of tea."

In other actions the board:

Granted permission for the Kennedy Brothers Co. to set up public storage garages less than 75 feet from the street building line at 2301 and 2331 Cathedral ave. and 2901 Connecticut ave. nw.

Gave Jerry Maiatico, the builder, permission to convert a penthouse into apartments at 2501 Q st. nw. and Leon M. Betts permission to construct an elevated passageway from the second story of a dwelling to a flat deck roof of a detached building in the rear of 3804 Ingomar st. nw.

Piney Point Oil Terminal Plan Opposed

By The Associated Press

A Washington firm's plans to build a 20-million-gallon oil terminal at Piney Point, Md., is being protested by boatmen and property owners in that area.

An Army engineer spokesman yesterday said a petition against the $1,250,000 project of L. P. Steuart & Bros., Inc., has been received from residents of McKays Beach, Piney Point, Tall Timbers and St. George's Island.

As a result, he added, a public hearing will be held August 5 at Valley Lee, Md., south of Leonardtown.

The Army engineers must approve two phases of the project—an 1100-foot pier just above Piney Point Lighthouse and an overhead pipe line across Piney Point Creek.

The spokesman said the protesting residents say those structures would be a menace to navigation and there would be a threat to marine life by possible oil leaks. They also protest their property's value would decrease.

Curtis Steuart, president, said his company has no plans to do any refining at the terminal and therefore there would be no waste oil.

He explained the plan is to bring oil to the terminal in large tankers for storage and reshipment to Washington in small barges.

Austrian Occupation End Seen in May, 1950

Vienna, Austria, July 20 (U.P.)—A high government official said today that Russia expects the occupation of Austria to be ended by May, 1950, by which time a treaty is expected to be signed.

The official said the Soviet administration of Russian properties in Austria had been ordered by Moscow to liquidate all business by that date.

Chinese Reds Meet Small Resistance

Hongkong, July 20 (U.P.)—Chinese Communist columns were reported rolling steadily through south central China today, meeting little opposition as they moved south an estimated 40 miles a day.

The Nationalists ordered civilians in Canton to prepare to evacuate and Nationalist troops began building earthwork defenses.

In Kiangsi province the Red armies of Gen. Liu Po-cheng swept forward 60 miles to capture Suichuan, road junction 4 miles north of the provincial capital of Kanchow (Kanhsien).

Biggest immediate danger lay in the Changsha area, 200 miles south of Hankow, where four or five separate Red units were racing to cut off Gen. Pai Chung-hsi's central China forces.

Chiang Kai-shek received United States Minister Lewis Clark in Canton.

Capital Calm

Army Revolt In Guatemala Flickers Out

Guatemala City, July 20 (AP).—A military revolt against the government of President Juan Jose Arevalo flickered out today.

Calm spread over this capital after 24 hours of battle following the assassination Monday of Col. Francisco Javier Arana, chief of the armed services.

Loyal troops and civilian volunteers last night gained control of Fort Guardia de Honor, seat of the revolt. All fighting ended.

Police Director Victor Manuel Sandoval said 40 persons were reported killed.

Several United States citizens were endangered, but none was injured.

The United States vice consul, Thomas S. Grunwell of Arlington, Va., had just finished bathing Monday night when a 50-pound bomb penetrated 4 inches of reinforced concrete and exploded in his bathroom. This morning he found a .50-caliber slug had smashed into his office at the Embassy.

(Grunwell, 33, of 3233 N. Woodrow st., had been assigned to Guatemala only a month ago. Grunwell was vice consul in Bogota, Colombia, during the 1948 revolution there.)

It was the first full-fledged rebellion to develop from 20 plots reported directed against Arevalo's regime since he was elected in 1944 to a six-year term in the Presidency.

Guatemala lies in Central America between Mexico and Honduras and El Salvador on both the Caribbean and the Pacific. Population is estimated at 3,706,205. The area is 45,452 square miles.

McCloy Sees Berlin Mayor On Finances

Berlin, July 21 (AP).—United States Military Governor John J. McCloy dropped zonal problems today and tackled the complicated Berlin question.

The new American chief in Germany called in Mayor Ernst Reuter of western Berlin.

Most of the private discussion was devoted to finances. The city faces bankruptcy after 14 months of competing East-West currencies, the Russian blockade, railway labor trouble and unemployment.

McCloy was said to have told Reuter the city must live more austerely.

The three Western commandants today protested to the Russians that the Soviet-controlled railway system has violated the agreement which ended the recent rail strike because it refused to pay westmarks to employes who live in the west sectors but work in the Russian sector.

Informed sources said McCloy plans to combine the information services division with public information under one chief.

$1,900,000 Sought To Build Lab for Guided Missiles

Commerce Secretary Sawyer yesterday asked Congress to authorize a $1,900,000 guided-missiles laboratory.

The laboratory would operate under the National Bureau of Standards, but Sawyer indicated it would be built outside the District.

He said the laboratory was needed to comply with a Navy request to the Bureau of Standards to expand its guided missile research work.

He said the present program is being conducted in huts with makeshift arrangements. He said the Navy intends to use the bureau's facilities indefinitely for the guided-missile research.

Mobster Shot In Hollywood

38, his aide and target of another recent assassination attempt, had a bullet in his spine and was paralyzed from the hips down.

Miss Dee David, 26, suffered four .38-caliber slugs in her back.

Cooper suffered two .45-caliber bullets in the abdomen and had to be given transfusions.

The small group gathered in front of the restaurant awaiting their cars when from across the street the fusilade began. Restaurant operator Barney Ruditsky, an eyewitness, said the shooting came from behind a low retaining wall across Sunset Boulevard.

In addition to the injured and Ruditsky, others standing on the sidewalk at the time were Florabel Muir, newspaper and magazine writer, who narrowly escaped injury when a bullet passed through her sleeve; head waitress Ruth Black, who said a bullet whined past her head; Frank Nicoli, one of Cohen's men and escort of Miss David; Jimmie Rist, another Cohen henchman, and Eli Rubin, also a member of Cohen's group.

Policeman Too Late

Witnesses reported Herbert screamed, "I'm hit. Get 'em."

An effort to get the assassins was made by Police Sergt. Darryl Murray, of the Los Angeles gangster squad, still inside the restaurant when the shooting started. He ran out, gun in hand, but the gunmen had fled.

Police found two rifles and a score of empty shells behind the retaining wall.

At the hospital Cohen told officers the shootings were the work of "a couple of mad dog punks." He said Attorney General Howser talked him into putting himself on the spot.

"The only guy who knows what is what about the shooting is Howser," the gang chief said. "His office called my attorney and asked him to have me give full cooperation for a couple of days. Evidently they had a red hot tip."

One year ago Cohen was the victim of another attempted assassination at his haberdashery, just a few blocks from the scene of today's shooting. The gunmen got one of his aides, Harry (Hooky) Rothman, but Cohen ducked into a men's room and escaped.

Herbert's life was endangered a few months ago when gunmen outlined his body with eleven slugs as he was about to enter his apartment. He escaped unharmed.

Cohen was credited with touching off the Los Angeles vice investigation after police picked up one of his henchmen, Harold (Happy) Meltzer on a gun charge.

Cohen complained that police arrested Meltzer because Cohen refused to be shaken down by the police vice squad for a contribution for the election of Mayor Fletcher Bowron.

At Meltzer's trial, Cohen's attorney tried to introduce recordings allegedly linking the arresting officers with the notorious callhouse madam, Brenda Allen. The jury failed to agree on Meltzer's case.

The county grand jury subpenaed the recordings and investigated alleged connections between police and the Allen woman.

In the midst of the investigation Police Chief C. B. Horrall resigned because of ill health. A shakeup of the department is in progress.

WOODS RAMBLERETTE—Trying out some ideas of his own, Federal Rent Director Tighe Woods has built this $7000 home which he believes may help solve some housing difficulties. It has one bedroom but the living room (left) may be used for sleeping quarters the architect. R. J. Barr, jr. is also president of Housing Incorporated.

Woods said the homes were a non-Government experiment designed: (1) to show that such homes can be built to sell at prices persons making $50 weekly can afford, (2) to improve housing conditions around military installations, and (3) to prove to builders that the buying public will purchase similar small homes, thus ending the housing shortage and eliminating any need of OHE, which Woods heads.

Architect Barr said plans for the homes had not been submitted to the Federal Housing Agency to determine if such a small house would qualify for FHA mortgage insurance. Without such insurance, most builders find it impossible to obtain construction money.

Barr said the design and materials were of high enough quality, however, that he felt the home would more than qualify for FHA mortgage aid.

Nearly all speculative builders submit their plans to FHA before construction. If plans are approved, FHA will give a higher mortgage insurance commitment than if the builder applies for such aid after the home is completed.

Woods said his group built the pilot model first, taking a chance that lending institutions would be interested in it enough to loan money for construction of similar homes.

He said several Government groups were interested in the pilot homes, including both the Senate and House Banking and Currency Committees, which recommend housing legislation.

Representative Carl A. Vinson (D., Ga.), chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, is also interested in Woods' housing effort and has invited other committee members to inspect the home with him.

Representative Vinson's committee is nearing the end of hearings on a military construction bill which would authorize the Armed Forces to spend nearly 150 million dollars on new quarters for 7798 service families.

The bill would limit homes in this country to an average cost of $16,500 each, with no limit on those erected overseas. As recommended by top defense officials, the bill would limit family quarters for all ranks to a maximum of 1080 square feet, more than twice the size of Woods' house.

Woods said his home could house a family of four comfortably, with the parents in the bedroom and children sleeping in the curtained-off living room. The pilot house makes wide use of draw curtains to partition off the kitchenette from the living room, another curtain to partition the living room into two small rooms.

A large area for clothes storage is formed by drawing a curtain to partition off one end of the bedroom.

The only dead storage space in the home is provided by a small attic area over the kitchen and bath. The home is located on a half-acre plot.

Conference Advances D. C. Pension Bill

A congressional conference committee yesterday cleared the pension bill for widows and children of District police and firemen.

The committee dropped from the bill a Senate provision not included in the House version for a $1000 lump-sum payment to the estate of a policeman or fireman killed in line of duty.

The conference group also trimmed from $500 to $250 the Senate provision for payment of funeral expenses, but extended it to apply to all police and firemen, not just those killed in line of duty. The present payment is $75.

The bill boosts the monthly pension for widows from $60 to $125; for children from $10 to $25; ups the age limit for children receiving the payments from 16 to 18, and increases from 3½ to 5 per cent the retirement deduction from police and firemen's salaries.

One on the Aisle—

Grace and Paul Carry It Alone

By Richard L. Coe

THE HARTMANS—Grace and Paul—are doing handsomely at Olney. So great is their eclat as satiric dancers that they've virtually sold out for the week, and personally I'd drive even a hundred miles to watch this engaging couple.

Their current vehicle, "Up to New," is billed as a "new musical revue," an elasticity of terms indeed, for it is scarcely new, hardly musical and a revue only in the sense that while Grace and Paul are changing their duds, a few scraps and pieces are tossed on stage. Out of twenty numbers, three new ones are amusing, and the Hartmans at their best, which is delightfully funny, are the Hartmans as we've all long loved them.

There is an idea—the flowering of civilization from Eden to Atom—behind the title, but it is dropped after the first number and revived only for the finale. Surely the Hartman script writers should have done better than this. Indeed, I suggest they take a year off for study at Catholic University's speech and drama department, whose spring-time musical was, except for Grace and Paul, miles more clever than this.

Of the sketches, most topically amusing is "Another Investigation," wherein a Senate subcommittee is effectively spoofed, with Grace and Paul as a couple who've invented a super-atomic bomb. Also good fun is Paul's appearance as a cooking expert before a ladies' club, with Grace at its mad-hatter chairman. And there's another good one with Grace as a decidedly realistic burly stripper, Hunsbuns LaVerne, whose part catches up with her.

But three sketches do not make a "new" revue, however much fun the trio may be. A Dodgers' fan at Ebbets Field, a visit with a psychiatrist, a take-off on the movies, some pallid love songs wanly sung are carbons of better things and listless on their own.

Johnny Barnes Taps

Of the small supporting company, only Tapster Johnny Barnes has anything like enough zing to hold an audience. Phil Ingalls, at the piano, and Jack Aylio, at the drums, make the orchestra pit more diverting than the stage while the Hartmans are catching their breaths.

From all this, don't get the idea that Grace and Paul have little to do. They're busier than the FBI, and if their version of an Arthur Murray dance studio is still their best number, it's also one of the merriest sketches on the stage today. The misplaced erudition with which Grace introduces her partner, his limp tributes to la danse are grand fun and you'll also enjoy their ballet take-off in which Grace becomes a flame who winds up in a fireplace.

Syrjala's settings contribute brightness to many numbers, particularly one expansive, merry drop depicting a version of the Olney in marble. One more bow, then, for the wizard of the brush.

Yes, you'll enjoy the Hartmans, but it is a pity they can't dig up some writers and associates who are in their own league.

ALL THE THEATRICAL organizations are individually and collectively protesting the delay and resulting publicity surrounding the reentry to this country Sunday of Clarence Derwent, Actors' Equity president . . . The Justice Department has stated that his arrival at LaGuardia Field on a holiday led to the six-hour grilling of the actor . . . In New York, after waiting two days for an explanation, the actor was shown an anonymous letter which "someone" had placed in his file stating: "It might be well to look into Derwent's record because it might be discovered he had a communistic record" . . . This anonymous scrap of conjectural paper, mysteriously appearing in a folder, might well be the reason any of us, supposedly armed with the proper papers could be held and headlined across the land as "a Communist" . . . It's not a comforting thing, this shameful, anonymous bungle; Derwent has been completely cleared, but the clearance hasn't gotten the vast publicity the first story received.

THE AVC is sponsoring Sunday night's performance of Buster Keaton and Teddy Hart in "Three Men on a Horse" at the Meridian Hill Park Theater.

FACTORUM DICK SKINNER has moved into an old gas station on the Olney Theater property, but it's the snappiest old gas station you ever saw . . . Rough stone walls, smooth new floors, the ultimate in plumbing and cooking facilities and NO TELEPHONE (the Devil's Own Invention) make this a unique hideout you'll glimpse from the road as you drive from Washington onto the Olney parking lot.

"ANNA LUCASTA'S" opening at the Howard Theater Friday night promises to draw all confirmed theatergoers who have energy enough to move . . . Though Miss Anderson's "Medea" and the Meridian Hill Park season have given professional theater open-air showings in town, this will mark the first full Equity cast to play the Capital since the National closed its stage door last August 1.

"LITTLE LEAGUE BASEBALL" titles special short subject narrated by Bill Stern and approved by the presidents of the American and National Leagues which will be shown tomorrow at the Apex, Saturday at the Naylor, July 30 at the Senator and August 6 at the Atlas . . . Emerson Yorke made the picture at Williamsport, Pa.

UNHAND ME, WOMAN—Yvonne DeCarlo doesn't seem exactly welcome to Howard Duff. They've the title roles in "Calamity Jane and Sam Bass," the Western arrjving this morning at the Capitol

Body in Channel Identified as Navy Accountant

The body of a man tentatively identified as Burt Hamblet Smith, 57, 123 Danbury st. sw., was recovered from Georgetown channel by harbor police yesterday, just north of Hains Point.

Homicide Squad officers were investigating his death, although District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said there were no marks of violence. MacDonald said he believed the body had been in the water for "three or four days."

MacDonald said Smith was a Navy Department accountant. His wallet and money were intact, although he said he found several pawn tickets in the wallet. Smith was last seen alive by his neighbors in the middle of last week.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THE DISTRICT BOXING commissioners, still in there punching for a bigger take from the promoters' revenues, have tidied up something for Congress called H. R. 5578. It was introduced last week, but on the day it achieves hearing status before a subcommittee Mr. Charles Ford is going to scream "Foul!"

Attorney Ford represents Promoter Florence Turner of Turner's Arena and he already holds one notable decision over the Boxing Commission. That was when he haled 'em into court on January 11, 1947, for abusing their authority to withhold boxing dates for his client. He is fairly drooling at the prospect of a rematch with the commission before a congressional committee.

POVICH

What they call H. R. 5578, framed by the corporation counsel at the behest of Commission Chairman Heinie Miller and introduced by Representative Oren Harris of Arkansas is a sneak punch, Ford says.

"Framed is the right word for the bill," declares Ford. "It's a frame-up by the commission to take a bigger bite out of the promoters' business under the guise of clarifying the commission's powers. They didn't even do a good disguise job."

COMMISSION CHAIRMAN MILLER had said that the bill was designed merely to clarify Section 3 of the old bill regulating boxing in D. C. The amendments, he said, would give the commission specific power to assign dates for shows, an authority that was merely implied in the present law.

"That's nonsense," exploded Ford. "They've dressed this bill up with a lot of language and would have you think it's just a harmless rewording. They don't need any specific authority to control dates. They already have that in a court opinion. The guts of this new bill is in the last two paragraphs, dealing with Section 9. That's where they have the joker."

Section 9, as they have rewritten it, now asks for authority by the commission to collect 10 per cent of the promoters' television and radio receipts, as well as 10 per cent of the gate receipts as commission tax. There is no such proviso in the present law. That's one of the items on which Ford is going to bat for his client.

"THEY'RE TAKING dead aim on the by-products of the promoters' business," Ford charges. "They don't have any more right to a cut of radio and television receipts than they have a right to a cut of the hot dog and coke sales at the fights.

"They're trying to show big surpluses for the District that could be a forerunner to more salaries for the Boxing Commission. The commission doesn't need the money. It is carrying a $15,000 surplus. At the end of the 1948 fiscal year they turned back $5700 to the U. S. Treasury, earmarked as commission earnings."

Miller points out that New York and other States have laws cutting their commissions in for a share of the video-radio receipts. That leaves Ford unimpressed. "We don't have to follow blindly the example of New York or any other States," he said. "New York came up with an innovation called Murder Inc., but that's no reason the District of Columbia should sponsor the same kind of outfit."

Ford railed, too, against another provision of the D. C. law that entitled the commission to all forfeit money posted and lost by fighters. "That money ought to belong to the promoters who stand all the expense of the show."

THE COMMISSION'S high-sounding plea for specific authority to assign or refuse boxing dates is Ford's particular pique, however. "They know damn well they already have that authority, even if it isn't in the present law," he said. "That was upheld in 1947 by an opinion of Justice Letts in District Court.

"We won our case against the commission in that trial because Judge Letts, while acknowledging that the commissioners had the power to assign dates, found that they had abused it in the Turner Arena case and ruled for us. The commission could issue dates at its discretion, but it couldn't be harshly arbitrary about it, the court ruled.

"They don't want any more control over dates. They have all the power they need. This whole new bill is just a cover-up to get the commission authority to muscle in on more of the promoters' revenues. They're kidding themselves if they believe they can con Congress into anything of the sort, with their amateurish attempt."

Griffs Blow 2-Run Lead In 8th, Lose Again, 6-5

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Detroit, July 20.—Mickey Harris folded in the stretch again and the Detroit Tigers shot by him and the Nats to post a 6-5 decision today.

On the threshold of a six-hit, 5-3 triumph, which would have been his first as a Nat, the former Red Sox lefthander was crocked for three runs in the eighth inning as the Tigers spurted to their second straight over the furiously fading Nats.

Shortstop Johnny Lipon who drove in the winning run last night, came through again today, squeezing in Hoot Evers with the run that brought Harris his sixth loss and the Nats their fifth in a row.

For Harris, who yielded 10 hits—the same number the Nats got off of five Detroit pitchers, it was the third straight late-inning setback.

He had a 4-1 lead over the Yankees at Griffith Stadium July 1 going into the ninth inning, but the New Yorkers won, 5-4. A week later, he had a 3-2 lead in the ninth over the league-leaders, but lost that one, 4-3, in 12 innings.

Bunt Bothers Harris

Until Harris ran out of gas in the eighth, it appeared that he would pitch the Nats out of a slump which has now seen them lose 19 of their last 24 games, and drop to seventh place.

He had retired eight in a row, but started his own downfall by walking George Kell with one away in the eighth. Vic Wertz followed with a single and Hoot Evers lashed out his second run-producing single to score Kell.

Johnny Groth, who also got two hits and paddled in two runs, singled Wertz home and sent Evers to third. Lipon followed with a bunt to the mound which Harris overran trying to field and Evers raced in with the third run of the inning and the one which made the cozy Briggs Stadium gathering of 7,288 glad they had come out to the park.

Right Hander Lou Kretlow was the first of the five pitchers the Tigers paraded to the mound against the Nats, but he was disposed of in the fifth inning when the Nats scored three times to vault into a 4-2 lead.

Ed Stewart accounted for three of the Nats' five runs, blasting out two run-producing singles and scoring once himself.

Stewart knocked in Eddie Yost with a single in the third inning to stake the Nats to a 1-0 lead and in the fifth his second single propelled Harris across during the three-run Nats sortie.

After the Tigers touched up Harris for their third run in the fifth, the Nats struck back in the eighth with three singles off Fred Hutchinson to boost their lead to 5-3 and set the stage for the Tigers' payoff rally in the bottom of the same inning.

Art Houtteman, last of the five Tiger pitchers to see action, got credit for the win to make his record 7-5.

The official scorer first gave the victory to Hutchinson, the fourth Detroit pitcher, but two hours after the game ruled that Houtteman had won.

Haefner Officially Goes on Waiver List

Pitcher Mickey Haefner, object of Owner Clark Griffith's wrath, yesterday was placed on the waiver list by the Washington club.

The Chicago White Sox, it is reliably reported, will claim Haefner at the $10,000 waiver price.

Ralph Kiner (right) and Dino Restelli

The heftiest one-two punch in the major leagues will be brought to Washington by the Pittsburgh Pirates on Monday night in their exhibition game with the Nats.

Outfielder Ralph Kiner, who shared home run honors in the National League for the past two seasons, now is distancing all challengers in the home run department. He hit his twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth of the season yesterday to beat the Dodgers.

Riner lately came up with a powerful running mate in Rookie Dino Restelli, Pacific Coast League graduate who became an immediate sensation by hitting six homers in his first 10 games for the Pirates. Like Kiner he is a right-handed hitter.

In Griffith Stadium, they will be shooting, however, for the longest left field fences in the major leagues.

The game is being staged for Attorney General Tom Clark's juvenile delinquency fund, with all gate receipts ear-marked for the purchase of recreation equipment for youths of the Washington area. Tickets are now on sale at Griffith Stadium at regular season prices.

75,340 See DiMaggio Hit Triple, Home Run

Cleveland, July 20 (AP).—The New York Yankees fattened their American League leadership over Cleveland to 4½ games tonight by defeating the Indians, 7 to 3, before a crowd of 75,340.

The biggest night attendance at any night ball park this season watched the Yanks blast Bob Feller from the mound in the third inning in the second of a critical three-game series.

The Yankee Clipper, Joe DiMaggio, was the big man of the evening, unloading a two-run triple in the third inning and belting his seventh homer of the year in the fifth.

Pitcher Ed Lopat, who had to be jerked in the eighth when the Indians threw a scare into the Yanks by loading the bases, was credited with the victory that squared matters so far. Cleveland beat New York in the series opener yesterday, 5-4. Yogi Berra also homered for the Yanks.

The Indians seemed to be starting something in the eighth. Mickey Vernon and Larry Doby opened the frame with singles and after Joe Gordon walked to fill the bases, Joe Page took over for Lopat.

Page walked Lou Boudreau to force in a run and pitched two balls to Bob Kennedy. Then Doby darted for home in an attempted steal and dove into the plate head first.

Boudreau Fines Doby After Game

Cleveland, July 20 (AP).—Centerfielder Larry Doby of the Indians was fined tonight after he made a futile attempt to steal home in a game with the Yankees.

Manager Lou Boudreau, who did not disclose the amount of the fine, told newsmen:

"It was based not only on that attempt to steal home tonight. Larry has taken several unnecessary chances lately. This should make him more careful."

Doby tried to romp home from third in the eighth inning with the bases loaded, nobody out and the Indians trailing, 7-3.

Said Yankee Catcher Berra: "Sure, he surprised me. Who'd think a guy would try a stunt like that?"

Troublesome Trees Finally Removed By Irate Golfers

Red Oak, Iowa, July 20 (AP).—It looks like some golfers will stoop to anything to improve their score.

For years two trees in the middle of No. 6 fairway about 60 yards from the tee have spoiled many a nice drive.

But one morning this week golfers found the trees had been felled during the night.

Club President Tom Carder said it was the work of "a party or parties unknown."

Chisox Beat Masterson In 9th, 8-7

Chicago, July 20 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox slowed down the upward surge of the Boston Red Sox by winning an 8-7 thriller before 6,824 persons today. It was Boston's fourth defeat in the past 15 games.

George Metkovich, a former Boston player, played the lead role in the Red Sox setback. He tripled off Walt Masterson, third Boston pitcher, to open the ninth.

Malone's Fly Wins

After Cass Michaels and Dave Philley were purposely passed to fill the bases, Eddie Malone hit the second pitch to Tommy O'Brien and Metkovich scored the winning run.

Ted Williams' No. 22 home run pulled the Red Sox into a 7-7 tie in the Boston ninth. Ted drove a Bob Kuzava pitch into the left field lower pavilion with two mates aboard. It was the second time this season Williams smacked a left field round tripper.

Rena Grattan Wins Feature

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Rena Grattan easily won the richest harness race ever staged in Maryland—and that includes the $3000 purse and the amount of money bet on it—at Laurel Raceway last night.

A top crowd of 8775 turned out for the next-to-last program and wagered $347,838—a new betting record. Previous high was the $336,973 bet on the closing night last year at Laurel.

It was strictly a "them that has gits" program. For instance, Joe Hylan held the reins on Rena Grattan as she took the feature, the $3000 Laurel Cup.

Hylan's triumph was fifteenth of the meeting and it practically cinched the leading driver honors for the Pine Hurst (N. C.) veteran. Hylan, you know, also was top driver at Rosecroft.

And Rena Grattan's no stranger to the winner's circle. The 4-year-old mare, owned by Clair Weaver of Harrisburg, Pa., set the mile standard at Laurel, six nights ago when she turned it in 2.04 2/5. Last night at 1¼ mile, she raced to the front immediately and won by a good five lengths over Sultan Hanover.

There were enough skeptics among the banner crowd that thought Rena Grattan shouldn't go the extra mile and she returned what was almost a handsome $4.20 payoff.

The $58,972 wagered on the feature event was the most ever bet on one race in Maryland harness history.

In the third race, Willer Up came through at $12.40. Astounding thing was that Willer Up, handled by Harry Stout, started from the jinxed No. 9 post position. It was the first time in 19 nights that a No. 9 horse won. That includes 60-odd starts.

Pitcher Holds Foes but Gets Belted Out of Box by Bolt From the Blue

Atlanta, July 20 (AP).—Ronnie Clark, 15-year-old neighborhood team pitcher, was knocked out of the box yesterday—but not by opposing batters.

Ronnie was hurled from the mound when a bolt of lightning struck a nearby tree, injuring the pitcher and three other persons and scattering over 100 spectators of the City Park game. The injured were treated for burns and shock.

Detective I. A. Thomas said the bolt struck the tree, splitting it open, then leaped to steel reinforcements in a swing frame around which several players and spectators sat.

Ranging down the steel supports, the charge ripped up a chunk of earth and flung it across the diamond.

Giants Whip Cincy, 5-1

New York, July 20 (AP).—The New York Giants established a consecutive inning scoring record today as they whipped the Cincinnati Reds, 5-1, for the second straight day.

Scoring in each of the first three innings, the Giants extended their scoring spree through 14 consecutive innings to better the previous mark of 12, set by the Giants of 1923.

The Giants began the string last Monday, tallying at least once in the last three innings against the St. Louis Cardinals. They added eight more yesterday (they did not bat in the ninth), and three today for 14.

Oddly enough, Sid Gordon started the streak with his eighteenth home run, and ended it with his nineteenth.

Cards Beat Braves, 6-4

Boston, July 20 (AP).—Lou Klein's two-run double off the left-field wall gave the St. Louis Cardinals a 10-inning 6-to-4 victory over the Boston Braves tonight after the Cards' ace, Howie Pollet, had been belted out of action in the second session.

Pollet spotted the Tribesmen a 4-0 lead, which Johnny Sain held up to the sixth. Then two costly errors plus a single and a Joe Garagiola double provided the Red Birds with three tallies. In the eighth the Cards deadlocked when Nippy Jones doubled and Glenn Nelson lashed a pinch hit single.

Sain then gave way to Nelson Potter, and that cagey right-hander coasted along until, with two out in the tenth, Nelson, who had remained in action on first base, singled. Red Schoendienst connected safely before Klein lashed his game-winning blow.

Bucs Bump Bums by 8-6 On Kiner's 2 Home Runs

Brooklyn, July 20 (AP).—Ralph Kiner's second home run of the game, with two mates aboard in the ninth inning, enabled the Pittsburgh Pirates to come from behind and defeat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 8-6, today. Cliff Chambers, in relief, picked up his sixth victory against one loss.

Kiner's first homer and his twenty-fifth of the campaign, put the Bucs ahead, 2-0, in the third. The Dodgers went ahead, 3-2, in fifth, when Ralph Campanella banged his fourteenth home run with one mate aboard. They added another pair in the sixth, but Pittsburgh tied the score at 5-5, with a three-run rally against Ralph Branca in the seventh. The most damaging blow was Dixie Walker's pinch-hit homer with one on.

Gil Hodges' single followed by Carl Furillo's double regained the lead for the Brooks in their half of the seventh. In the ninth, singles by Pete Castiglione and Dino Restell in the top of the ninth, finished relief pitcher Erva Palica. Don Newcombe took over and served Kiner his twenty-sixth home run.

Arcaro Wins $10,000 Oaks With Adile

Monmouth Park, N. J., July 20. Flying Tarter and Mill Point combined winning efforts here today to provide the largest daily double—$2113.40—in Monmouth Park's history.

Flying Tartar's straight price was $31.20. In taking the second race Mill Point paid $62.

A crowd of 14,522 sweated out the hot and humid program and 28 of that number held $2 tickets on the winning daily double combination, promptly forgetting their discomfiture.

And the heat didn't mean a thing to the one unidentified patron who held a $10 ticket, thereby collecting $10,567 on the 6-11 combination.

Eddie Arcaro made a special trip from Long Island to ride Adile in the Monmouth Oaks and easily won the $10,000 stake for Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords.

Adile, a red roan, was heavily backed in the mile and a sixteenth fixture for 3-year-old fillies and paid only $3.60. William Helis' Delta was second, a length and a half behind and Red Camelia, another eight lengths back, took the show spot.

C. V. Whitney's Jazz Baby, second choice, turned in a dismal effort, winding up sixth in the seven-horse field.

Welsh Upset in Mid-Atlantic Net

Unknown Horsley Ousts Champ

By Jules Loh

Barney Welsh, nine-time winner and defending champion was eliminated yesterday in one of the greatest upsets in the history of the Middle Atlantic tennis tournament.

Shelton Horsley, unknown player from Richmond, Va., ranked seventh among the visitors, outlasted the top seeded local veteran, 7—5, 3—6,7—5, at the Kenwood Country Club.

Horsley was down 5-2 and 30-love in the third set when he began a barrage of volleys and drop shots which overpowered his exhausted opponent. Welsh held a lead in the first set, 4—1, but was unable to capitalize as the 90-degree heat wore him down.

By virtue of the upset Horsley gained a berth in the quarterfinal round and will face Tony Vincent, from Elmhurst, N. Y., today.

Vincent, fourth seeded out-of-town entree, was ahead 3—1 in the third set of his fourth-round match with Gil Bogley, National Junior Champ, who defaulted at that point due to a sudden illness. Complete scores were: 3—6, 6—2, 3—1.

Another local player was ousted as Hugh Lynch, sixth seeded domestic, dropped a 6—2, 6—2 fourth round match to Air Force Lieut. Charley Oliver, second ranked among the visitors.

Captain Robin Hippenstiel stroked his way to today's quarterfinals with a close 6—3, 3—6, 6—2 victory over Baltimore's Bernie Schrieber. Also advancing to the fifth round was third seeded local star, Jim Thackara, who dropped his first set to Maj. Tom Bonner and then found the touch and whipped him 3—6, 6—2, 6—0.

Thackara's quarterfinal opponent today will be Hal Burrows, top-seeded visitor, who came up with a 6—3, 6—3 trouncing of Phil Neff.

In the women's division Magda Rurac, two-time National Clay Courts titlist, coasted to a 6—1, 6—1 win over Sara Moore without losing her serve throughout the match; Charlotte Decker also advanced to the quarters with a 6—2, 6—3 accomplishment at the expense of Ann Varela; and Ann Gray had a perfect day in spanking Mrs. Frances Winston in two love sets.

TODAY'S PAIRINGS
MEN'S SINGLES—4:00, Johnson vs. Oliver; 5:00, Horsley vs. Vincent; Burrows vs. Thackara; Tully vs. Leavens.

Burkett Leads MATS Golf

Capt. Bernard Burkett carries a 10-stroke lead over the rest of the field into the final 18-hole round of the Military Air Transport Service golf tournament at Fairfax today.

The Bermuda-stationed golfer yesterday had rounds of 75, 75, 77 for a 54-hole total of 227, 10 strokes better than Maj. Bob Ross Andrews Field and Capt. R. C. Dineen, Westover Field, who were tied for second with 237s.

Master Sergt. Jimmy Jiminez, National Airport, was in fourth place with a 239 total of the tournament which will qualify its top six finishers of the Air Force world-wide tournament at Wright-Patterson Field, Dayton, Ohio, beginning July 31.

Others still within striking distance of the leaders are, Master Sergt. Milo Whisler, Greenland and Capt. Rob Roath, Andrews Field with 240s.

Porpoises Give Chase

Bay Fishing for Croakers Picks Up in Shallow Waters

By Ralph Murdock

BAY FISHING for croakers has been a hit-and-miss proposition for several days except in shoal water, where catches up to 25 were taken just before and after sunset. A number of these fish were nabbed in as little as 4 feet of water. They are well scattered due partly to large schools of porpoises now in the Chesapeake. It is characteristic of the hardhead to move in close to the shore in the evening to feed on shell bottoms. Previuosly the larger catches were made in 60 feet of water on mud bottoms.

Murdock

This situation could reverse itself, but for the time being your best fishing will be in shallow water if you are seeking croakers. The ultimate proof is that the rowboats are bringing in fair catches and averting shutouts which happen in deeper water.

Light tackle with 1 to 2-ounce sinkers in lesser depths produces the best sport. We suggest casting about in different directions for coverage while anchored. Change positions frequently unless the fish continue to bite. A 100-yard move often changes a dull situation into a profitable one while trying to locate the elusive croaker after sundown. This method works best in 4 to 15 feet of water.

TROLLING FOR ROCK at Rock Point hit a new high in that area when 36 large rock were hauled in by Frank Peederbaugh, Mike Reinhart, Dr. J. E. McLean and Bob Reinhart, all of Cumberland, Md. Capt. Tommy Stein did the steering. The Marylanders also reported several nice catches of hardheads.

One of the largest catches of porgies in the current season was made by six C. and P. Telephone workers from Washington while fishing at Chincoteague. They were George Angerman, Norman Lambert, James Bohannon, Howard Dean, Durwood Wiseman, and Doc Sloan. They fished on Winter Quarters Shoal over wrecked ships and performed the feat in 2½ hours actual fishing time. Angerman, the spokesman for the wire men said, "It was the best fishing trip I ever had. They never stopped biting after the first line was baited. We were pulling in porgies two at a time."

Squid was the bait. The skipper was Captain Thornhill and a good time was had by all. Lest we forget, 250 porgies were captured. They weighed from 2 to 4 pounds and almost filled six bushel baskets.

Weekend Fishing Suggestions

Where they are biting:

HARDHEADS—Breezy Point to Annapolis in shoal water, catches at present small. Evening is the best time.

ROCKFISH—Lower Potomac up to Tall Timbers—trolling is your best bet. Some 12 pounders were taken recently.

SPOT—The lower Patuxent and Potomac Rivers and Chesapeake Bay—very plentiful. Bloodworms will do the trick. Use light tackle and small sinkers.

PERCH—Holland Point Bar. Grass shrimp makes the ideal bait.

TROUT—Lower Patuxent and Potomac Rivers. Use peeler crabs for best results.

EDGAR BOWEN, at Solomon's Island writes that some employes from Tom's Auto Service had a catch of 400 fish. Edgar also reports that Robert Blackistone, of the Plaza Hotel; Henry Burroughs, of the Grey Line and John Daggert, a B. and O. trainman also had excellent luck in the Solomon's area.

Oldtimers can't recall when spot were more plentiful than at the present. We have had numerous reports of 100 spot being taken in a couple of hours and it appears that the bay from Point Lookout to Annapolis is literally loaded with spot. They bite on all kinds of tides and will feed until the anglers supply of bloodworms is exhausted.

Here's a party of eight D. C. anglers who fished for seven hours and the spot still were biting when the last piece of bait was devoured. They used 24 peeler crabs and six dozen bloodworms. The anglers were Charles Hughes, Mrs. Jeanne Hughes, and her son, Roy, 10, Lucille Lee, Joe Winstead, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Drake and Jerome Jones. They fished with Capt. Taft Tippett who pilots the boat Bay Queen. The catch consisted of spot, trout, and bluefish totaling the staggering sum of 622. Most of the fish were spot.

Williams Defends His Title Tonight

Los Angeles, July 20 (AP).—Bristling statements of confidence emerged today from the rival boxing camps of Lightweight Champion Ike Williams and Challenger Enrique Bolanos on the eve of their 15-round battle for Ike's crown.

Boldest prediction came from the champion's mouthpiece, Manager Frank (Blinky) Palermo of Philadelphia, who said:

"It will be a hard fight but I think Ike will knock him out, inside of 10 rounds."

Williams won a 15-round split decision in their match last year. Referee Charley Randolph gave the nod to Bolanos but the two judges tabbed Williams the winner.

Third man in the ring at Wrigley Field tomorrow night will be the Old Manassa Mauler, Jack Dempsey.

Matchmaker Charles MacDonald was optimistic about the success of the show. He expects a turnout of 18,000 to 20,000 fans.

He thinks it will gross past the $100,000 mark and might approach the $153,000 the pair drew last year.

Official promoters of the bout are Comedians Lou Costello and Bud Abbott. Profits will go toward lifting an $83,000 mortgage they say is on the Costelo Youth Foundation, East Los Angeles Recreation Center.

This is the third set-to for the fighters. In April, 1946, Williams stopped the then fresh young kid from Mexico in eight rounds.

Order Expected to Shift 10,000 Jobs Slated for D. C. to Distressed Area

The White House is expected to order the shift of 10,000 new Federal jobs earmarked for this city to one or more of the country's distressed economic areas.

Commerce Secretary Charles Sawyer, it was learned, has ordered his staff to get all the facts on the proposed job transfer on which to make a recommendation to the White House. The jobs involved are 10,000 temporary clerical workers his Census Bureau will hire to tabulate and analyze the results of next year's general census.

A top official predicted a transfer order would be issued by September 1 to a city yet to be determined unless the additional costs involved prove to be excessive.

The job shift would be made under the President's new plan to shift Federal contracts and other aids to those areas where unemployment is growing.

In announcing his policy, the President directed Secretary Sawyer to make fact-finding studies of economic conditions in all parts of the country and to make recommendations to help those in distress. The President appointed his executive assistant, John Steelman, to coordinate the project and to carry out agency recommendations.

The suggestion for the transfer of the huge Census clerical force was made by the Commerce Department.

Department officials are now reported to be making surveys in half a dozen large metropolitan areas to determine the extent of unemployment among white-collar clerical groups; available office space, since more than a million square feet would be required for the big clerical force; and the cost of transferring the work from this city.

It would be substantially cheaper to have the work done here, where trained personnel equipment, and office space are available.

Earlier this year the Public Buildings Administration sought funds from Congress to build a storage-type office building at nearby Suitland, Md., to house the temporary Census clerical force. Census has its headquarters at Suitland. PBA Commissioner W. E. Reynolds said the building would pay for itself in five years. He planned to convert the building into a record center after Census completed its work.

Nevertheless, the PBA request was rejected and its officials began to look for office space outside this city to put some of Census' temporary work. Since that time, space in Federal buildings here has been found to house most of the 10,000-man force. Census had been assigned the temporary buildings around the reflecting pool, among others. Now the White House policy to help distressed areas has changed the plans again.

One proposal is said to have called for dividing up the clerical staff and for the transfer of it to three different cities, one in the East, another in the Midwest, and the third on the West Coast. It's reported to have been turned down as too expensive and impractical. The present plan is to transfer the entire operation to a single large city.

The bulk of the 10,000 employes will be file clerks, tabulating and punch-card operators, typists, and general clerks—people who will be paid from 2000 to $3000 a year. They will tabulate the millions of census forms to be gathered by Census' army of enumerators. Schools here are giving special courses in operating punch card machines to students who are interested in the Census jobs. The Veterans Administration has built up a temporary staff of 1500 card punch operators to help get out the GI insurance dividends and these people are looking forward to transferring to the Census jobs.

The 10,000 Census clerical jobs will last an average of a year. Some persons will have them as long as 18 months. Some of the old-line Census staff here would be shifted temporarily from this city to supervise the clerical operation.

Next year's general census will be one of the Government's largest peacetime operations. It's now estimated that it will take 175,000 part-time and temporary eumerators to collect all the information the Government will want. More than 200 different questions will be asked of each family.

The census won't be a mere head-counting project. It also will be a census of unemployment, housing and home mortgages. Data will be gathered on family income, home appliances, etc.

Salesman, 35, Listed As 2d to Die From Polio

Originally Believed Sleeping Sickness Victim; 3 More Cases Reported

Second polio death of the year in the greater Washington area was reported yesterday, along with three new cases in the District.

Victim of the disease was Milton E. Morris, 35-year-old salesman, 5032 Bradley blvd., Bethesda, Md. He was admitted to the Naval Hospital at Bethesda on June 1, and died there the same day.

Dr. Frank J. Broschart, county medical examiner, accepted the original diagnosis in Morris' case, which said he suffered from encephalomyelitis, or equine sleeping sickness. The first death certificate was made out that way.

However, yesterday, the Navy completed laboratory tests which showed the death actually was from polio. The two diseases frequently are very similar in symptoms.

The reports yesterday brought total polio cases in the District this year to 11, compared with 7 on the same date last year, and to at least 23 in the Greater Washington area, including two deaths. The first death, that of a Riverdale, Md., man, occurred at Gallinger Hospital on July 12.

The District cases yesterday were a 5-year-old boy of the 1800 block of 18th st. se., admitted to Children's Hospital Sunday; a 6-year-old girl of the 1700 block of 28th st. se., admitted to Children's Hospital Monday, and a 15-year-old girl from the 100 block of 47th st. ne., admitted to Gallinger Hospital, July 4.

Dr. C. C. Dauer, director of the Health Department's bureau of preventable diseases, said all District cases this year except the first two have been mild ones.

A B & W Strike Is Voted But Buses Will Run

Union Ballots At Midnight Meeting As State Prepares To Take Over Line

Drivers of the Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Transit Co., voted at 1:30 a.m. today to strike and the State of Virginia took over operation of the line at 2 a.m.

Officials of the employes' union had previously assured Governor William M. Tuck of Virginia that they will work if the state takes over so no interruption of service will take place, so far as could be learned early today.

Issues at stake are a new contract, wages, and some fringe issues.

Offer Is Rejected

In a meeting at the Odd Fellows Hall, Alexandria, which began after last midnight, the men voted to reject an offer of a 4 cents per hour wage increase. They seek 30 cents per hour.

Governor Tuck had previously issued necessary proclamations for taking over the operation and State representatives were ready and on the company property hours before the strike was voted.

Fail to Agree

In the last hours of the 35-day strike notice period under Virginia law, Gilbert S. McCutcheon, Federal mediator, and Edmond M. Boggs, Virginia Commissioner of Labor and Industry kept management and union representatives in continuous session for nine hours yesterday, without agreement.

Under the old contract which the company previously offered to renew, drivers receive a maximum of $1.35 per hour and mechanics, $1.45.

W M & A Formally Served With Arbitration Notice

W. M. & A. Motor Lines yesterday was formally served with an arbitration notice by its AFL union of drivers and maintenance men, a move which might turn out to be a legal step toward a strike.

The union, saying it was acting under its contract with the company, notified Leslie L. Altmann, president, it desired to arbitrate dismissal of E. J. Garrity of West Beach, Md., and had appointed Eli Oliver, a labor attorney, as its member of an arbitration board.

This action, according to Charles Penrod, union financial secretary, gives the company five days to pick its member of the board. The two representatives then would pick an impartial chairman.

However, the company thus far has held that the union—Division 1365, Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America—does not have the right to represent Garrity, a stockroom employe at the time he was fired.

The union contends Garrity still holds a union card, although he was crippled in an accident while working as a mechanic.

The drivers and maintenance men will meet twice today, at 10:30 a. m. and 8:30 p. m., at the Boulevard firehouse, Bradley Heights, Md.

The meetings will determine what the union will do if the company still refuses to arbitrate the Garrity case. Last week, the members voted to strike at once over the issue, but union officials persuaded the men against undertaking a wildcat walkout.

The union yesterday announced that management had agreed to arbitrate a second dismissal case, involving J. W. Bortot of Bradley Heights, Md., a former bus cleaner. President Altmann, however, said the issue was still under consideration and discussion.

The W. M. & A. Motor Lines operates buses primarily between Prince Georges County and the District.

Pool Dispute Negotiations Begin Today

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Negotiations to settle the swimming pool controversy begin today.

A District Recreation Board committee will meet at 1 p. m. with officials of the Interior Department's National Park Service in an effort to end the segregation row that led to the closing of Anacostia pool June 30.

Just what kind of agreement, if any, can be worked out remains to be seen. The District board has insisted it will run the pools only on a segregated basis. Interior Secretary J. A. Krug has declared he will not agree to reversion to segregation in any pool now run on a nonsegregated basis.

Interior now considers that McKinley, Banneker and Francis are nonsegregated. National Capital Park's superintendent Irving C. Root, a Recreation Board member, said yesterday. He made no statement about Anacostia. Board superintendent Milo F. Christiansen said yesterday, however, that none of his personnel is now on duty during nonsegregated swimming periods. Interior has supplied life guards for the morning hours at McKinley, currently being largely used by Negroes.

The way was paved yesterday by the Recreation Board for the pool negotiations. The board formally voted, 6 to 0, to change its by-laws. The change promises "every possible and realistic effort" toward ending the practice, but without a timetable.

The board then voted, 4 to 2, to adopt the present line-up of open white and Negro areas. Mrs. Alice C. Hunter and Root voted against the proposal yesterday. Mrs. Hunter wanted some playgrounds, which she did not name, switched to nonsegregated use at once. Mrs. O. G. Hankins, newest board member, was absent.

The by-laws change also will lead to eventual transfer after negotiations of Interior's golf courses, bicycle concession and boating concession.

Recreation Board Chairman Harry S. Wender, James E. Schwab and Christiansen were named to negotiate with Interior. Christiansen met yesterday afternoon with Root to gather financial and other data prior to today's meeting.

Yesterday's by-laws action followed approval of the proposal by Interior Secretary J. A. Krug. Krug said in his letter to the board that the board had "promised" its proposal on Krug's earlier letters and statements, including the one indicating he would not back down from his demand for nonsegregation of the pools.

Schwab pointed out that the board had made no such "premise" and Wender agreed that there were no conditions attached to the offer.

New Contract Is Signed by Cement Union

AFL cement finishers yesterday signed a new work contract with the Master Builders Association granting them a 10-cents-an-hour increase in pay. The agreement, which will run for a year, gives the small craft union a base pay of $2.35 an hour.

The cement finishers' local met Tuesday night and approved the 10-cent raise. The union had originally asked for 50 cents an hour additional, but accepted the pattern set by the carpenters and laborers, who won a 10-cent raise after a strike of more than six weeks.

Randall Wyant, executive secretary of the Master Builders, yesterday commented:

"This move by the cement finishers is welcomed by the Master Builders Association as insuring the maintenance of peace in the industry. The builders desire to treat all trades alike and avoid creating dissatisfaction in the industry."

Wyant's statement indicated that the area's builders and contractors are willing to grant 10 cents an hour more in pay to those 19 AFL crafts which have yet to sign up for a 1949 contract. Among these are the dump truck drivers, ironworkers, and rodmen.

The dump truck drivers are asking 22 cents; the ironworkers, 25 cents; and the rodmen, 15 cents. Another group, the operating engineers, is seeking a health and welfare fund.

The cement finishers, numbering 400, did not participate in the long summer strike that paralyzed the area's commercial construction industry, although its work agreement expired at the same date—April 30—as the work contracts of the carpenters and laborers.

Optimists Told Of 6 Problem Drivers' Traits

Traffic Director George Keneipp yesterday described the six problem drivers to more than 100 members of the National Capital Optimist Club at a luncheon meeting in the Hotel Continental.

"The Younger Driver," 17 per cent of the driving public, causes 25 per cent of all accidents, Keneipp said.

"The Drinking Driver," 600 lost their licenses last year for dangerous driving.

"The Accident-prone Driver," 5 per cent of the driving public, causes between 20 and 25 per cent of all accidents, he said.

"The Speeder" causes 45 per cent of all driving fatalities and 37 per cent of all driving injuries, Keneipp told the Optimists.

"The Reckless Driver" has the wrong attitude and his license must be revoked, he said.

"The Physically Incompetent Driver" is the object of a special Traffic Division campaign, Keneipp said. Thousands of them hold valid permits, he said, and yet should not be driving.

Truck Driver Honored For 200,000 Safe Miles

For driving a Woodward & Lothrop truck around Washington 200,000 miles in 15 years without an accident, John Wright, 46, of 212 36th st. ne., was named "Driver-of-the-Month" yesterday by the D. C. Trucking Association.

Wright

Wright, who has been employed at Woodward & Lothrop for the past 31 years, received a certificate and a wrist watch at the truckers' meeting in the Mayflower Hotel.

Common sense, courtesy and observance of traffic regulations was the formula Wright said he used to avoid accidents during his 15-year stint. He is now eligible to compete for the "Driver-of-the-Year" award, which will be made in December.

AAA Manager Charged With Traffic Violation

Washington I. Cleveland, 53, whose vocation is the promotion of traffic safety, was arrested Monday in Montgomery County on a traffic charge, it was learned yesterday.

Cleveland, who is manager of the Washington office of the American Automobile Association and chairman of the Montgomery County Safety Board, was charged with crossing a double white line to pass six cars.

Pvts. Frank Fisher and Vincent Castiglione of the county police said the violation occurred over a half-mile stretch on Route 240, the Rockville Pike, between Corby's Hill and Garrett Park rd.

Yesterday, Cleveland posted $6.45 collateral at the county police substation at Bethesda. His hearing was set for 10 a. m. Monday in Bethesda police court.

Wife Beater Sent to Gallinger To Find If He's Drunk or Crazy

Psychiatrists at Gallinger Hospital will determine whether it was an unbalanced mind or too much alcohol which brought 33-year-old Louis Martin into Municipal Court yesterday.

Martin, 220-pound construction worker, is charged with beating and threatening to kill his 130-pound wife, Lucille, last Saturday night in their home at 3935 C st. se.

Martin's attorney, Herbert Horowitz, suggested that his client be sent to Gallinger for 30 days' observation. The prosecution raised no objection, and Judge Thomas D. Quinn set August 19 for trial.

Mrs. Martin is about 30, sandy-haired and the mother of six children, whose ages range from 2 to 12.

Her husband, she testified, supports his family "when it doesn't interfere with his drinking." She said he had been out of work recently because of the construction strike.

Last Saturday night, she testified, she was in bed when he hit her behind the ear with his open hand and twisted her arms and legs.

She said this went on for hours until police arrived at about midnight.

Under cross-examination by Horowitz, Mrs. Martin testified that her husband has his own special form of torment for her.

Often, she said, he would pin her head against the couch, bang his fist on the wall near her head and accuse her of "vile, awful things." She said she believed his drinking was responsible.

Mrs. Martin told the court she recently went to work as a waitress.

"The day I went to work," she said, "there wasn't even food in the house. I couldn't ask my mother for food again."

Police information was that Martin accused his wife of staying out late after she began working.

Mrs. Martin testified that her husband had told her he would kill her if the children were not there. They have been married 13 years, she said.

Home Rule Hearings Cut Short; Will Be Continued on Friday

The Washington Post

JACK DOLTON MORTON LIFTIN VINCENT BROWNE
Witnesses Before House District Subcommittee

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Capital home rule hearings, cut short yesterday by a quorum call in the House, will continue at 10 a. m. Friday in what may be the final session.

In yesterday's half-hour meeting, the House District Judiciary subcommittee heard a witness sharply oppose home rule and two others appeal for its approval.

Against the bill was Jack Dolton of the Amalgamated Casualty Insurance Co., which he said insures more than 50 per cent of all the taxicabs in Washington. He said he had taken up the question of home rule with hundreds of persons, and "I've yet to find one man interested or who wants this bill."

Dolton charged the home rule bill would lay Washington open to a communistic government. He said there is nothing wrong with the present government, and that "if you pass this bill, I'm afraid you're going to have a lot of trouble."

Morton Liftin, representing the Washington Industrial Union Council, indorsed the Senate-approved home rule bill.

"In the light of the solemn pledges of both major political parties, in the form of their platform commitments to the American people, we doubt that it is necessary to argue at any length that the residents of the District should be granted home rule," Liftin said.

Vincent J. Browne, testifying for the Washington branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, also indorsed the bill. He hit at the argument that national representation for the District should come before home rule, saying:

"In the fully organized territories of Alaska and Hawaii, the people govern themselves without national representation. It is interesting to note that some of the people who are saying that home rule for the District wouldn't mean much without national representation are also saying that since Hawaii and Alaska have local self-government, they don't need national representation."

Court Upholds Customer in Dress Action

Judge Milton S. Kronheim, Jr., in Small Claims Court last night denied the Hollywood Credit Clothing Co. a claim of $48.95 against a woman customer on grounds she had not contracted to buy merchandise.

The case had been continued from Monday when Judge Kronheim said he was disturbed by the number of small suits filed by the Seventh Street firm.

Jack Politz, attorney for the firm, contended that Mrs. Elsie Gray, 24-year-old elevator operator at Kann's Department Store, had signed a conditional sales contract on June 8 for two dresses, totaling $48.95. He said she arranged to pick up the clothes that night at 6 o'clock, along with an inducement gift of a straw pocketbook.

Mrs. Gray, of 918 D st. sw., said through her attorney, James C. Toomey, she had signed only an application for credit.

She said she had been told she would be contacted when her credit was approved and that she then would be allowed to take the merchandise. She said she changed her mind about the planned purchase several days after going to the store.

Judge Kronheim said the form that was signed consisted of two parts—the upper portion, an application for credit that was filled out, and a lower part, a sales contract, not filled out. The signature was at the bottom.

These facts, said the judge, indicated Mrs. Gray signed only an application for credit.

He said the fact that she did not take with her the gift pocketbook, or the clothes, further convinced him the transaction was not a completed sale.

2 Laundries Held Up for $40 by 'Mutt and Jeff'

A pair of "long and short" bandits held up two laundries here yesterday, 20 blocks and 20 minutes apart.

Police said they first appeared at the establishment of N. G. Soo, 206 H st. nw. One menaced Soo with his hand in his pocket as though he had a gun, officers said, while the other obtained $20. The pair missed a sum of money Soo had hidden, officers said.

Next they appeared at the Sam Shing Laundry, 1417½ P st. nw. Mrs. Gun Moy, proprietress, was in the place with her three children—Esther, 4; Ginny, 2½, and Tommy, 2 months. She denied having any money, she told officers, but Ginny opened a cashier's wicket, through which one of the bandits obtained $20. Mrs. Moy did not see a gun.

History Talk Tonight

T. V. Jett, of the National Park Service, will speak on "Tavern and Canal" at a meeting of the Montgomery County Historical Society in the Great Falls Tavern tonight.

A picnic supper at the tavern at 7 p. m. will precede the regular monthly meeting at 8 p. m.

Corning Meets Reserve Group For Cadet Talk

School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning met yesterday with members of the district department of the Reserve Officers Association to discuss the recently criticized public school cadet program.

Corning said he had asked the officers to meet with him before Representative Olin Teague (D., Tex.) published a charge that Corning was undermining the cadet program.

The group discussed how the ROA could help the program. Present at the meeting were Assistant School Superintendents Norman J. Nelson and Garnet C. Wilkinson, Paul Anderson, D. C. ROA president; Richard Lyons and Francis Ortman, D. C. ROA vice presidents; Thomas King, national ROA judge advocate general, and Oliver Gasch, D. C. ROA public relations director.

Checkers Ace Scores

Tommy Wiswell of Brooklyn, N. Y., checkers champion of the Army, won 20 and drew in 10 simultaneous checker games in an exhibition in the lobby of the Y.M.C.A., 1736 G st. nw., last night. Wiswell played 30 members of the Y.M.C.A. Checker Club at the same time and did not lose a single game.

Personal Property Tax Returns Due By July 31

Personal property tax returns are due by July 31, James L. Martin, of the Tax Assessor's office, yesterday reminded District residents.

Home owners, he said, are required to report on household effects, jewelry, tools and stamp and coin collections. Stores must make returns on equipment, fixtures and inventory, while professional men and women must include office equipment.

Returns are filed in the assessor's office, room 215 of the District Building. Penalty for late filing is a 20 per cent increase in assessment value.

Heat Hints

3. Heat exhaustion is generally not as severe as heatstroke, but occurs more often.

Its warning signs are headache, dizziness, sense of exhaustion and nausea. The patient's temperature may be below normal or only slightly elevated; he is more apt to be conscious than completely out. The skin is moist, sometimes cool and clammy. Bed rest is perhaps the best treatment. . .

Theft Suspect Flees After His Arrest

Police yesterday were searching for a theft suspect who escaped from a patrolman after being arrested on suspicion. He may have gunshot wounds.

Pvt. Raymond Camden stopped the man at 6 a. m., near 9th and S sts. nw., when he noticed the suspect was carrying a movie projector. When the man could give no good account of himself, Camden took him to a patrol box to telephone for a patrol wagon.

As he telephoned, the man dropped the projector and fled. Camden fired four shots at him. The projector was found later to have been stolen from the automobile of Arthur C. Hagan, of the University Club.

River Rescue Mystery

The identity of two youths who were rescued yesterday from the Potomac River after their sailboat tipped must remain a mystery.

One of the lads swung a "deal" to get off work, so publicity wouldn't help him—and the other's name might be a dangerous clew.

Anyway, two youths about 20 landed in the drink when the 12-foot Penguin Class sailing dinghy they had rented from Buzzards Point Boat Yard was swamped by the wash of an Army crash boat and then tipped over, just off Hains Point.

Chugging along just them came the Virginia, a tug of the Smoot, Sand & Gravel Co. The youths were pulled aboard and so was their craft.

A bit unnerving, all this—but certainly more fun than work.

Bittner Rites Set Friday in Pennsylvania

Pittsburgh, July 20 (AP).—Funeral services for Van A. Bittner, vice president of the CIO United Steelworkers, will be held Friday afternoon in suburban Crafton.

Mr. Bittner, 64, died last night in Mercy Hospital of a heart ailment.

A miner at 11, he was president of his local at the age of 15 and head of the powerful United Mine Workers District 5, comprising western Pennsylvania, at the age of 26.

He led the 1916 drive to organize the miners in Kentucky and Tennessee, in 1920 he headed that union's activities in the Birmingham (Ala.) soft coal fields, and from 1924 on he was the union's top representative in the difficult West Virginia field.

Before he and John L. Lewis, UMW president, parted company in 1942, Bittner was president of UMW district 17 in Charleston, W. Va., heading 100,000 miners.

The break between Lewis and Bittner came two years earlier when Bittner supported Franklin D. Roosevelt and Lewis supported Wendell Wilkie.

In 1936 Bittner helped Lewis and Murray form the steelworkers organizing committee which later became the United Steelworkers.

He was in charge of the drive to organize Bethlehem Steel and played an important part in unionizing the huge packing house industry in the Midwest.

Surviving are his father, his widow, the former Bertha May Walters of Latrobe, Pa.; a daughter, Mrs. James Wholer; a sister and a brother.

Mr. Walsh died Monday at his home at 3646 Warder st. nw. He had been ill since his retirement from Government service last April.

He was the son of Thomas Walsh, who operated a restaurant for many years at 10th and F sts. nw. His brother was the late Thomas D. Walsh, a detective sergeant in the Metropoliton Police force, who died eight years ago.

Mr. Walsh attended St. John's College here and took a law degree at Georgetown University. In 1917, he began 32 years of service in the War Department.

He was supervisor of numerous units in the transportation division of the Department's finance office. During World War II, he was assistant chief of the freight branch and was cited by the chief of finance for his work.

He was a member of the Knights of Columbus. Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth V. Walsh; a nephew, Francis X Walsh, Washington attorney who lives at 2021 S. 2nd st., Arlington, and three nieces who live in New York.

Mrs. Daley, who died Monday in Gordonsville Community Hospital, was a lifelong resident of Orange.

She was a charter member of the Thirteenth Virginia Regiment Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy and was a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Fr. Coughlin Won't Conduct Murphy Rites

Harbor Beach, Mich., July 20 (U.P.).—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, militant radio priest of the 1930's, today was invited to deliver the sermon at the funeral of Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy, but declined because of a previous engagement.

Father Coughlin traveled from the Shrine of the Little Flower in Royal Oak, Mich., to call on the Murphy family and express regrets he will be unable to officiate at the requiem high mass Friday.

Detroit City officials asked that the body of the red-haired bachelor jurist be brought there Thursday to lie in state at City Hall. But the Rev. James J. Marvin, pastor of Our Lady of Huron Lake Church from which Murphy will be buried, said the family was undecided.

Murphy's brother, Recorder's Judge George Murphy, said the condition of his sister, Mrs. William Teahan, would determine whether the body would be returned to the city where Murphy served as depression mayor.

Father Coughlin, founder of the Social Justice Party, had been a bitter enemy of President Roosevelt, one of Murphy's closest friends.

The radio priest's public life ended several years ago under pressure by the church.

The Fev. Father Marvin said the family had not yet decided who will officiate at the funeral.

Burial will be in the family plot beside his parents. Gov. G. Mennen Williams, a political protege of the former Michigan Governor who died of a heart ailment yesterday, will be one of the pallbearers.

Flags at Half Staff Here

Flags flew at half staff here yesterday as admirers, friends and even opponents mourned Justice Frank Murphy of the Supreme Court who died Tuesday in Detroit.

Delegations from the Supreme Court, Congress and other groups prepared to leave for Michigan for funeral services Friday.

President Truman will send Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin as his personal representative at the high requiem mass in the little church where Murphy was baptized.

Chief Justice Vinson and all members of the Supreme Court except Justice William O. Douglas, who is overseas, will attend the services.

Dr. Brendan F. Brown, dean of the law school of Catholic University, paid tribute to him as a true friend of Catholic University whose memory always will be cherished.

"The Nation and especially the legal profession," Dean Brown said, "has sustained a great loss by the untimely death of a wise and understanding judge whose varied and cosmopolitan career was marked by a desire to espouse the cause of the underprivileged."

Joaquin M. Elizalde, Ambassador of the Philippine Republic, said:

"In Justice Murphy's death, the Filpino people lost a trusted and loyal friend. He was the last American Governor General of the Philippines and the first High Commissioner when our country became a Commonwealth.

"Justice Murphy retained an active interest in our welfare after leaving us. After the liberation, he organized the Philippine War Relief of the United States."

Mrs. Alice Strother

Pearisburg, Va., July 20 (AP).—Mrs. Alice Williams Strother died this afternoon in a local hospital after an illness of several weeks. She was the widow of Robert P. Strother, former collector of internal revenue, and lived for many years in Richmond.

Postlude

Jan Peerce Stops Show At Watergate

By Paul Hume

Jan Peerce stopped the show at the Watergate last night—stopped it cold in its tracks.

And cold was not the word for it. The huge crowd that came to hear him sing, whistled and cheered and shouted in the noisiest demonstration I have yet heard down by the Potomac.

Finally Peerce, after two encores, made a speech. He said, "Ladies and gentlemen, I would just love to stay here all night and sing and sing. But I can't. Something terrible has happened. We sent down some music and it didn't get here."

At this point the crowd moaned and made noises as if Peerce were kidding. He wasn't. He went on, "So I'll tell you what we'll do. We'll repeat La Donna e Mobile—how's that?" The audience settled and, with the repetition, the Peerce part of the show ended.

The popular Metropolitan tenor sang a Handel aria, songs by Bishop, Victor Herbert, Cyril Scott, and Sigmund Romberg. He also sang the big aria from Meyerbeer's L'Africaine, and, for his first encore, "Falling in Love With Someone."

His singing last night did not arouse in me the same mad enthusiasm it awoke in most listeners. In such ballads as last night, he lets his less artistic side take over far too much.

Howard Mitchell labored to cheer us up with Schubert's Rosamunde Overture and a suite from Rimsky-Korsakoff's Golden Cockerel. Strangely enough, neither of these pieces sounds convincing over amplifying systems, with the exception of the closing pages of the suite.

Four dances from the Prodigal Son by Frederick Jacobi were proof that, at least in Jacobi's version of the parable, the son lacked any trace of repentance.

The orchestra, which found Warner Bass' excellent arrangements for most of Peerce's songs a bit tough to follow, held up well in instrumental parts of the evening.

Friday: Jorge Bolet, pianist, in Franck's Symphonic Variations and the Liszt E Flat Concerto, plus other great works.

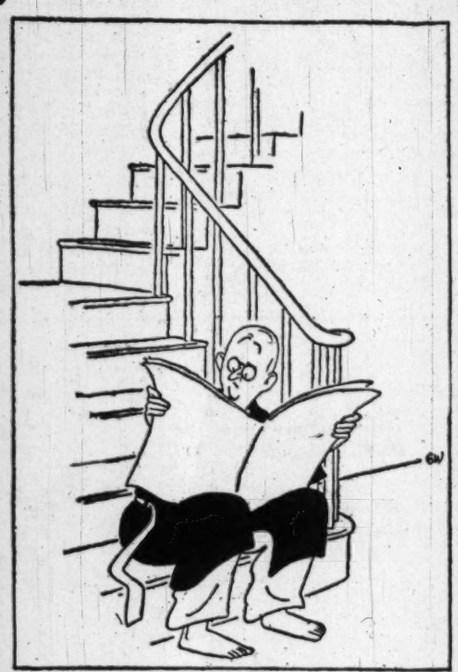
Father of the Bride

Kay's Stipulations Are Few, Fixed, Firm ——And Frustrated by Fate's Fickle Finger

This is the fifth of 14 instalments of that popular saga of the forgotten man, "Father of the Bride." This condensed version of Edward Streeter's novel chronicles the story of Mr. Stanley Banks as he watches the rise of the greatest show on earth (his daughter's wedding) and the fall of his bank account.

By Edward Streeter

Illustrated by Gluyas Williams



Unfortunately, he had not been mistaken

THE ONLY step remaining to make the whole thing irretrievable was the announcement of the engagement in the papers.

Mrs. Banks considered the wording of the notice of vital importance. Her brother, Uncle Charlie, had worked on a Chicago newspaper for several weeks when he was a boy. Since then he had been regarded as an authority on all matters concerning the press. He was now called in as a consultant.

Uncle Charlie said it didn't make a damn bit of difference how you wrote the notice. The society editor would hand your copy to the office boy, who would botch the whole thing up anyhow.

Mrs. Banks pooh-poohed this. She declared that, in spite of such journalistic cynicism, this notice was going to be letter-perfect. It was written, read, rewritten, reread, submitted to the Dunstan family, revised and resubmitted. There were eventually so many drafts lying around that Mr. Banks couldn't remember which was the one that had been finally approved.

Kay was the only person who showed no interest. As long as they spelled her name with a "K" and not with a "C" she was satisfied.

Mr. Banks finally took what he hoped was the right draft down to the office to have Miss Bellamy make six copies.

Miss Bellamy was more excited about the wedding than any of the principals. She had been his secretary for 15 years, during which she had devoted so much time to his personal as well as his business affairs that she had found no opportunity to get married herself. As a compensation she had gradually assumed remote, but nonetheless complete, control of the Banks family.

In a crisis such as this, therefore, Miss Bellamy naturally felt the weight of her responsibility. She had a real affection for Mr. Banks, but it was that of a mother for a backward son. Mrs. Banks she secretly regarded as a cultured incompetent. She had no illusions, therefore, that anything about this whole affair would be handled properly or efficiently, but she was out to do her best to pick up the pieces.

Miss Bellamy made several editorial changes in the copy without even referring the matter to Mr. Banks. Then she typed it with unerring speed. "We must read this back," she said. "There mustn't be any mistakes at this point."

She read while Mr. Banks stared unseeingly at the original with fierce concentration.

"There," he said. "That's one job done as it should be." Miss Bellamy nodded understandingly. She was a great comfort to Mr. Banks. Although much too tactful to make any direct comment, she always made it quite clear to him that she knew what he was up against.

All Unaware of Bombshell

THE following morning he was out of bed before the alarm went off. The morning paper lay on the door mat. He glanced up and down the shaded length of Maple dr. Not a soul was in sight. His neighbors slumbered, unconscious of the bombshell about to explode among them.

Sitting on the bottom steps of the front stairs, he turned to the society section. There was Kay's face, smiling at him, and in the news column next to the picture the headline "Catherine Banks to Wed ex-Marine Officer."

He looked up again. Unfortunately he had not been mistaken. It was spelled with a "C" instead of a "K." That damn fool editor. He'd go around and give him (or was it her?) a piece of his mind. In the meanwhile he had the home team to cope with.

He padded in his bare feet to the little room behind the stairs known as "The Office." Two of Miss Bellamy's copies of the release were lying on the desk. He had to force himself to look. "Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Banks of Fairview Manor announce the engagement of their daughter Catherine." How could Miss Bellamy! Then he remembered that he had read it back with her.

"Is it in?" Mrs. Banks was standing in the doorway.

"Yes, but they've garbled it up just as Uncle Charlie said they would. They've spelled Kay's name wrong."

"Oh, Stanley! The one thing the child—"

"I know. I know. But what can you do? That's labor for you. They don't care any more. It's the reason the country's in such a mess."

He climbed the stairs noiselessly, hoping Kay might sleep until he was safely on the train to town.

Kay Insists on Small Wedding

A MODERN wedding is somewhat like a new theatrical production. Once the cast has been decided upon, the next thing is to determine whether it is to be Big Theater or Little Theater and then fill the house.

Kay opened the argument at dinner. "I'll tell you one thing," she said. "This is going to be a small wedding and a small reception."

In theory this should have been music to Mr. Banks, but his trained ear sensed a discord. "I was talking to Jack Gibbons the other day," he said. "Jack's married off four daughters and he says weddings are either confined to the bosom of the family or held in Madison Square Garden."

"Well, mine is neither," said Kay. "I'm going to have my own friends and it's not going to be a business convention."

"Who said anything about a business convention?" interrupted Mr. Banks. "All I'm saying is you'll end up with either 30 or 300."

"Three hundred!" There was a suggestion of hysteria in Kay's voice. "Pops, if you mean that you're crazy. I know what you and Mom want. You want every old fogy in town so that you can hear them say, 'Yes, she really was too lovely. And the most beautiful dress, my dear.' Well, I just won't have it. This is my wedding and it's going to be my friends."

She suddenly left the table and rushed up the stairs. Mr. Banks stared after her in amazement. "Good God, Ellie. What's the matter with Kay?

"She's nervous," said Tommy, through a mouthful of cake. "All women are nervous."

Anyway, It Was an Idea

KAY was alone at the breakfast table when he came down the next morning, feeling as if he had just returned from a three-day college reunion. Looking like a May morning, she slipped a piece of bread into the toaster for him.

"Hi, Pops."

"Hi," he said gloomily. He wondered how it was that women could go through these shattering emotional scenes and bounce up a few hours later as carefree as a seagull behind the Queen Mary. He watched her butter the toast and a thought began to formulate in his jaded mind.

"Listen, Kitten. I've got an idea."

"I don't know whether it's good or not—and for God's sake don't tell your mother."

"Of course not. What is it, Pops?"

"I'll give you and Buckley $1500 dollars to elope."

She looked at him incredulously. "Are you kidding?"

"No, honest."

"Why, Pops, you must be out of your mind. Elope? Not have a wedding? Why, I wouldn't dream of it! Why, you know Mom would die if I didn't have a wedding with all the trimmings. I guess I would too. Not have any friends to see me get married—and all the people I've grown up with. Why, it wouldn't be getting married, Pops. But you're just pulling my leg."

"O. K.," he said. "I just thought—O. K."

She came around the table and kissed him on the ear. "You're sweet, Pops. Only don't stew so much."

Smug in Neutral Corner, Goldie Awaits the Bells

Goldie Ahearn is a boxing promoter. He loves to see a good fight. But so far, in the early stages of the arrangements for the August 14 wedding of his daughter, Bernice Ellen, to Robert Emannuel Weinberg, everything is bliss, peace and relative calm. However, the wedding is still almost a month away. This may be a fool's paradise.

The living room is full of egg beaters and Goldie Ahearn gets a kick out of it. He has to crawl over boxes of towels, linens and silverware to get to bed. But he gets a kick out of it.

The accumulation of shower and wedding presents under foot still strikes him as amusing. But remember there are 24 days until the wedding. Twenty-one shopping days for the sound of Mrs. Ahearn's after-shopping plaint, "Goldie, I'm so tired," to get monotonous. Twenty-one shopping days to run up the bills. Right now Mr. Ahearn thinks it's all amusing.

"You remember that story they tell about women shoppers?" he asks. "They shop Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday and exchange Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Now my wife is shopping every day of the week with no time left for exchanging."

GOLDIE AHEARN

He lends half an ear to her explanations about the white organdy, the burgundy taffeta, the gray chiffon. "Don't tell me; just send me the bill," he says grandly. Caution, Mr. Ahern. Twenty-one shopping days left.

"Some fathers put on a sourpuss act, but in their own way they get a bang out of it," he surmises, judging from the wellsprings of his own limited experience.

Maybe it's his joy over the match that's carrying him through. "I've made a lot of matches in my day but never one like this.

"I clocked that boy as a real nice fellow the first time she brought him home," he says. "This match is a 'natural,' I got to admit even if I didn't make the match myself."

He's so fond of his prospective son-in-law he even brags about his talents as a technician for television, that thing—grrrr—which is ruining—grrr—the fight business. After opposing television in the fight arena for so long, he's somewhat astonished to find himself fond of—even related to—somebody in the television business.

He's pretty pleased about the seconds who've been lined up to succor the principals in the main event. Marylin, the bride's 15-year-old sister, will be maid of honor. And in the bridegroom's corner wil be "a nice up-to-the-minute, handsome man, 70 years young." It's Bob's grandfather who has promised the boy since he was just a youngster that he'd be best man at his wedding.

No, you can't get a hint of a complaint out of this father of the bride. Not one. But he does admit, "It's a cinch to get a card of fighters together compared to getting up a wedding.

"Whew!"

Maybe the Bankses had troubles with the newspapers but it was just a drop in the bucket compared to The Washington Post and the Wiegands.

Katherine Banks asked only one thing of her engagement announcement—that Katherine be spelled with a "K" instead of a "C." Of course, the newspaper appeared the next day with Catherine, but Mr. Banks could blame the error on his secretary, Miss Bellamy. OUR SECRETARY had nothing to do with the following:

In the account of Raymond Wiegand and his daughters on this page Monday, the story said Raymona's husband was Bob Lannon and Bob Lemon in the earlier editions, and Bob Lemond and Bob Lemon in the later editions. The gentleman's name is Bob Lamon. "Father of the Bride" is running true to life, isn't it?

Unscheduled Action Highlights Anniversary Fete

Women's Party Demands Equal Rights

By Nicha Soure

The Woman's National Party passed a resolution yesterday requesting President Truman to ask for action in the Senate on the Equal Rights Amendment.

A companion resolution was agreed upon demanding that Senator Lucas uphold the Democratic Party pledge and bring the amendment to a vote in the Senate.

The unscheduled action took place at a garden party celebrating the 101st anniversary of the first women's rights convention in Senaca Falls, N. Y.

Meeting at historic Alva Belmont House, national and local officers and members voted to send a letter to the President and to Senator Lucas following a report of the political chairman, Mrs. Cecil Norton Broy.

Bogged Down in Senate

Mrs. Broy said that although the amendment has 74 sponsors in the Senate and 296 in the House, the equal rights amendment is "bogged down" in the legislative schedule of the Senate. She added that the amendment has more than enough sponsors to pass once it is brought to a vote.

The equal rights amendment, supported by both the Republican and Democratic Parties, reads: "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex.

"Congress and the several States shall have power, within their respective jurisdictions, to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

"This amendment shall take effect three years after the date of ratification."

Preceding the meeting of the members of the Woman's National Party, the group, led by the national chairman, Dr. Agnes Wells, launched a "laying of the roses" ceremony at the statutes of Lucretia Mott and Elizabeth Cady Station.

Dr. Wells, in placing her bouquet of American Beauty roses, pledged the work of the National Woman's Party to passing the Equal Rights Amendment in the Eighty-first Congress. She reminded the members that both political parties pledged their support to the amendment.

"You'd be amazed at the number of women who don't know they are not protected by the Constitution," Dr. Wells said. She remarked that men today are quibbling about the word "rights" but everyone knew what "rights" meant when the Bill of Rights was adopted.

Bipartisan Backing

Judge Marion O'Harron, recently appointed to the United States Tax Court, said, "Elizabeth Stanton and Lucretia Mott had only their faith and vision to guide them. Their obstacles were great and they encountered opposition. A great many women today owe the privilege and opportunity they have to participate in community work to the courage of these pioneer women."

After the "laying of the roses" which will be an annual ceremony on the anniversary of the first convention at Seneca Falls, the Woman's National Party members gathered at the Alva Belmont House garden for refreshments.

And Children's Museum Is Homeless

The Little Dog Is Gone From Busy Street He Knew

By Marie McNair

FOR a quarter of a century riders on the Mt. Pleasant streetcar would wonder as they approached 17th and H sts. if the dog was wagging his head today.

This doesn't make sense, you say?

I'm thinking of the wire-haired terrier which stood in the window of the Toy Shop on 17th st. Some days he would solemnly nod, to nobody in particular; only to attract attention his way.

Then for weeks he would just stand there, a lonely figure, somewhat forlorn. Often I wondered if Miss Rachel Coffin, the little lady who owned the shop—now past her three-score-and-ten years—had a schedule by which she set her inanimate pet in motion. Or was it just on days when she herself felt chipper, even a little gay, and she wanted the world to know?

The little dog has gone to greener pastures now, and the toy shop too, has new, more modern quarters.

Miss Coffin has retired from the business world and serves only as an advisor to the Children's Museum of Washington, which is perpetuating Washington's oldest toy shop at 1607 I st.

The toy shop has had some distinguished patrons in its day. And they've found their way to its new home, sandwiched between an excavation and the red brick Gordon Hotel.

Mrs. Longworth There

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth—Princess Alice—brings her small granddaughter, the Alexander McCormick Sturm's Joanna, to the shop where "Mummy used to get her toys." Mrs. Sam Kauffmann's dismay turned to joy when she learned the shop would carry on. Mrs. Irwin Laughlin is a frequent purchaser, so is Mrs. Charles Dewey. And the name Montgomery Blair has been carried on the books for two generations.

The Children's Museum, like the trodden violet, has had a struggle to keep its head above ground.

Founded six years ago with Miss Matilda Young as the guiding spirit, the museum's first home was Villa Rosa, a rosy pink house on Massachusetts ave., surrounded by trees and greens. There for four years, girls and boys could study Spanish, French, draw, paint. They could learn the fascinating story of the development of minerals; were taught costume design, organized a falconry club, even maintained a zoo for wild animals.

Then came the bombshell! The house was to be sold. The Children's Museum would have to leave—find a new home. With little or no money behind them, here was a problem in a city already overcrowded and with inadequate housing.

Collection in Storage

The doll collection ,the mineral exhibits, in fact all the properties of the museum, are now in storage while the search for permanent quarters goes on.

There's an option on 2700 Tilden st., the house formerly occupied by Homer Cummings when he was Attorney General. It's a good house, surrounded by more than 8 acres of woodland, seems ideally suited for the museum's needs. Yet the neighbors—a few of them—are opposing it, and it looks now as if they'll succeed.

Meanwhile the museum itself has taken to wheels. Through the generosity of a trailer coach dealers' association, Miss Young was presented with one, and now there are two. Out in Bethesda, on the District Line, Miss Young has parked the "office," with file cabinets and desks

Mary Haworth's Mail

Eight Years Married to Handsome, Industrious, Astonishingly Faithful Fellow, Girl's Chronic Worry About Her Long Nose Keeps Her a Recluse

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 30 years old and have been married for eight years to an exceptionally handsome fellow who is a hard worker and unbelievably faithful. Our life is comfortable, but friendless—due to my being my own big problem.

I am tall, with a good figure and a rather pleasant face. Pleasant, that is, if you can overlook my long nose, which has a little hook on it. This silly-looking proboscis is my undoing; and I want to have it reshaped by plastic surgery, but my husband is against it.

I admit, very readily, that I am afraid of losing my husband to someone prettier. He laughs this off, but I have grown morose, self conscious, ashamed to face people or to try to make friends.

I feel that inasmuch as it is my nose and my nervous condition that are at risk, I should be allowed to do as I please. Am I right? Your sound advice will be deeply appreciated. O. D.

Phobic Expression of Self-Rejection

DEAR O. D: Turning aside from the mirror for a moment, let's consider the fact that you have an exceptionally handsome husband, of industrious character, who is astonishingly faithful, and moreover a champion of your nose "as is."

This I call proof-positive that your disputed feature isn't a barrier to being loved, devotedly, in toto; ergo, that it's not your nose which keeps you friendless, but rather a fixated attitude of self-condemnation, which finds tangential outlet in phobic worry about "proboscis."

Why the brooding self condemnation, which yearly grows more panicky and morose? And why, or how, did it happen to hit on the nose as the alleged cause of defeatist emotions? Produce right answers to these two questions and I think you'll find the nose is blameless; and, indeed, a pretty fine feature if rightly appreciated.

The connoisseur of interesting beauty would give the blue ribbon any day to a distinguished countenance, rather than a nondescript baby-face on a grown woman; and if your nose is a noble beak—and I judge it is, by description given—then it rates the adjective "distinguished."

Study Paintings; Treat Neurosis

YOU WRITE from a city rich in art collections, so search through the famous galleries, to study the faces of women chosen as subjects by the Old Masters—and I'll bet dollars to doughnuts you will discover that the more fascinating faces have plenty of nose, much on the order of yours. Incidentally, learn to distinguish between the artists' self-chosen subjects and simpering rich dames who bought sittings.

Back to your pernicious self-condemnation: It probably stems from an essentially sensitive thoughtful temperament, which naturally inclines to solitude or the company of like spirits, in preference to extrovert hobnobbing with any herd just to be one of a crowd. And I gather this sensitive temperament "took a beating" in early life—in ways that severely damaged self esteem and for cause that you couldn't fathom, with the result that guilty self-rejection became "second nature" in your feelings.

Then maybe somebody disparaged your nose—nastily or facetiously—and you inferred that was the trouble; but of course it isn't What you need far more than plastic surgery is psychiatric re-education for social citizenship; and my advice is to see what you can do about that, before trying to renovate the face. M. H.

About Marks on Mahogany

I have a mahogany dining table of very fine wood. I noticed some marks on it and had a professional polisher polish it last year. When the centerpiece was put back on the table, there is a mark where that is. There are gray rings, too. How can I remove them? Is turpentine good for that? H. E.

An excellent furniture wash which will take off surface soil can be made by adding 3 tablespoons linseed oil and 1 tablespoon turpentine to 1 quart hot water. Mix thoroughly and let cool. Then wring out soft cloth in this and wash small area of table. Dry immediately with a soft cloth. Repeat until entire surface is cleaned.

If this doesn't take off all the spots, try rubbing them with either camphorated oil or oil of peppermint. More stubborn stains and rings can be removed by rubbing with powdered pumice or rottenstone (cigar ashes are a substitute) mixed with linseed oil, sewing machine oil, or a similar light oil. Rub with the grain and finish by rubbing with a cloth dampened in fresh oil.

I have recently purchased a short white gabardine coat. I would like to know some method of cleaning it at home without spotting it so it will not have to go to the cleaners so frequently. The clerk in the store where I purchased it recommended taking a piece of sheet, dampening it with cleaning fluid and going over the coat. Is this method satisfactory or are there better methods? M. S. B.

The method you suggest would be satisfactory for removing most soiled spots, but would not do much to remove general soil. As a matter of fact, I know of no completely satisfactory home method for cleaning the coat. My best suggestion would be to protect it against dust and soil when not in use by placing it in a zipper garment bag and when soiled to take it to a reliable cleaner for dry cleaning.

Is there any other substitute for sugar on the market besides saccharine? Also, is there any cook book or any information on the market on how to cook and bake with saccharine? E. R.

I know of no other calorie-free substitute for sugar but saccharine. Of course, there are corn syrup and honey which can be substituted for sugar.

"Diabetic Menus, Meals and Recipes" by Betty M. West (Doubleday & Co., Inc.), has some suggestions for using saccharine in cooking. The author says that one fourth grain of saccharine has the sweetening effect of one teaspoon of sugar. In using it in cooking, saccharine should be added only after food is cooked because cooking it gives it a bitter taste.

Will you explain the difference, if any, between "after dinner coffee" and 'demitasse"? Is there a difference in the size of the cups used? C. B. S.

The terms "after dinner coffee" and "demitasse" are synonymous and the drinks are therefore served in the same cups.

Can you tell me what kind of floor covering to use on my very uneven kitchen floor? The floors have already been sanded, but the boards still sag considerably. The house is about 80 years old. I understand that linoleum would not stand up well under these conditions. Do you think an extra heavy felt lining would help? The area to be covered runs to about 22 by 10 feet, so I do not want anything too wildly expensive. J. H.

The floor should be made evener for any type of floor covering to be really successful. I'm afraid that heavy felt padding would not be enough to protect the linoleum against premature wear. One solution to the problem which would add some expense to the operation, but would insure a first-rate job, would be to cover floor completely with quarter- or half-inch plywood before laying linoleum. The plywood should be cut to exactly fit the floor and firmly nailed in place. The linoleum is then laid on top just as it would be laid on the original floor.

Low Heat for Cheese

Cheese will be hard and tough if it is cooked too long or at too high a temperature. When a dish containing cheese is baked in the oven, it's a good idea to keep the temperature moderate. When a cheese combination is cooked on top of the range, it should be put in a heavy saucepan and the heat kept very low, or put in a double boiler over hot, not boiling, water.

It's Costly, but Thrilling To Have All Your Clothes Taken in, Dieter Points Out

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

IN THE first white-hot flush of dietary enthusiasm, I contacted my inspiration—India Edwards. Mrs. Edwards had sloughed off 36 pounds and was, so she told me, plodding steadily toward an even more sensational total.

Though India, as executive director of the Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee, works harder, longer hours than a baker's dozen of everyday men, her life is not only sedentary, but tangled with political duties requiring constant, richly formal eat feasts. Her superactivity in the presidential campaign left her exhausted—and according to Prophet Kain, exhaustion leads to overeating as a subconscious pep booster.

The middle of February Mrs. Edwards' doctor issued a stern ultimatum—"Reduce—or else!" So she started immediately counting calories.

The Edwards character is made of such stern stuff that for six weeks she never slipped the teensiest fraction, sticking inflexibly just under a daily maximum of 1200 calories. Don't think it was easy, because it wasn't

She cut out butter, cream in coffee, switched to whole wheat bread, more or less avoided the things you'd expect.

But India pampered herself in a manner surprising to some determined dieters. She couldn't give up bacon, and, on parties, she refused to go without a highball—Scotch and plain water. Every morning her breakfast was tastied up with two slices of crisp bacon which was drained carefully on absorbent paper

Two Pounds the First Week

"I LOST 2 pounds the first week, then, not over 10 pounds a month," reminisced the executive director. "You've no idea how much better I feel!" Admiring the Edwards rosy glow and svelting silhouette, I asked if she had any special slimming dodges up her sleeve.

"I ate a lot of meat—steaks and chops," she mused, "and I made only one hard and fast rule.

"I avoided canapes like the plague. I looked at them, wanted them, but said to myself 'mustn's touch'—and I didn't."

This nobility of sacrifice touched me where it hurts most—lovely, lovely canapes, so tiny, so deliciously harmless looking. Who, I wonder, is eating those that Mrs. Edwards and Mrs. Thayer spurn?

Scale Trouble

"ONE OF THE reasons I had added so much weight," continued India, "was because of my scales."

"Because, subconsciously, I didn't want to weigh myself, I had pushed it in a corner of the bathroom.

"Now I've pulled it out into the middle of the room, where I practically stumble over it. AND I MAKE myself step on it every morning. If I've gained as much as a quarter pound—then I just slice off a few more calories the following day—and keep it up until I've made a definite loss!"

That French Bread and Butter!

"IN THIS reducing business, what was the most difficult thing to do without?" I asked.

"French bread and unsalted butter," Mrs. Edwards sighed. "You see, I eat luncheon almost every day in a restaurant close to my office. Their specialty is French bread AND the most irresistible unsalted butter which is passed in a huge wooden bowl and simply piled on your plate. But I've given it up—probably for good!"

"It's expensive to have all your clothes taken in. But it's such a thrill, the cost is certainly worth it," concluded India Edwards. Thinking of our four last year's cotton dresses, all purchased thriftily at a sale, and nary a new one this year—we nodded enthusiastic agreement.

Eat to Beat the Heat . . . and Take Off Pounds

Substitute Stretching for Those Calisthenics

By Ida Jean Kain

MARK Twain, who discovered 136 different kinds of weather in 24 hours in New England alone . . . had nothing on me. Let me lead off with . . . "Sweltering days, torrid nights, a wink of sleep and another sultry morning" and the day that column is printed the thermometer plunges. In some parts of the country, the readers, bundled in sweaters and jumping up and down to keep warm as they brew a pot of coffee, feel sure the writer is "tetched."

Well, it's all in the day's weather. If it's nice and cool where you are, go right ahead and exercise—slim inches off the waist and pounds off the hips. But if the weather in your vicinity is like St. Louis or Washington in the good old summertime . . . take it easy.

It isn't the heat, it really is the humidity. When the humidity is high, the air is heavy with moisture, and vigorous exercise just makes matters worse. But with no exercise at all, the body loses tone. So stretch—it's the only type of calisthenics tuned to hot weather.

IDA JEAN KAIN

When the alarm rings in another scorcher, don't get up . . . for 5 minutes. Stretch lazily. Gentle and effortless as it is, stretching tones and refreshes—besides, it feels so good. To get the most out of it, make it from tip to toe. S-t-r-e-t-c-h.

Now across . . . right leg over left, right arm back . . . pull. Center the stretch through the middle muscles. Reverse, left over right, and p-u-l-l.

This is nature's way of gently prodding the circulation into action. A natural stretch with the mild twist and pull that are part of it, contracts and releases and brings you to life . . . smoothly.

To get a firm grip on the middle muscles, bend one knee with sole of foot flat on bed or floor, then stretch all along the opposite side, flattening the small of the back. This straightens you out. Repeat—bend the other knee and stretch. Again . . .

You'll find early morning stretches ever so rewarding. Follow with a shower; not too cold, for that stimulates the body to get up steam. A luke-cool shower or bath is the most refreshing.

Allow ample time in the morning . . . time for a good breakfast and a leisurely walk to the bus. Don't hurry . . . it's heating.

And after work, instead of settling for an air-conditioned movie regularly, take a dip in a pool. It will help you to sleep better. A couple of swims a week and lazy stretching in the morning, plus protective nutrition, and you won't bog down with the heat.

Here is tomorrow's menu:

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

The Aftermath of Illness

Most of us know that after certain childhood diseases, one must be careful lest complications develop. The heart may be affected by rheumatic fever, the eyes by measles, and so forth. What is often less generally recognized is that there may be psychological complications.

Naturally, when a child is ill, we are much concerned and want to do everything possible to speed his recovery. If the illness has been a serious one, a pattern of concern probably has developed that does not stop with the child's recovery. We are so thankful that we continue to give the same solicitous care we did during the time our child was most ill. Youngsters, too, have found the sickroom attentions satisfying and naturally would like to have them continue.

It is important to take stock after we are sure a youngster is fully recovered and see whether we are continuing to treat him differently than we do his brothers and sisters. A period of illness often initiates a kind of continuing solicitousness that is good neither for the child nor the rest of the family.

The Lyon's Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—The radio companies have been advised that all broadcasts and telecasts of baseball games next season probably will be canceled, to take baseball out of the interstate commerce classification and therefore make the Federal antitrust laws inapplicable. The Gardella suit, which will come up before the Supreme Court, prompted this decision, for without radio and television the situation would be the same as in the case previously decided by the court, in favor of the club-owners . . . Eddie Rickenbacker and Arthur Godfrey will make a goodwill flying tour of South America, visiting the head of every country there . . . Life will print Joe DiMaggio's by-lined life story in six instalments.

Tony Farrell's investment in the Theater Guild's "Pursuit of Happiness" is $100,000—the largest single investment by any Broadway angel in another's production . . . Paul Porter, who leaves for Lausanne as the American member of the Palestine Conciliation Commission, has waived all salary for this mission . . . Actors are so conscious of the currency restrictions abroad, and of the sterling and dollar areas, that when Basil Rathbone said to Sir Cedric Hardwicke: "I hear you're leaving for France this week to make a movie. Will it be in French?" Hardwicke replied: "No, in dollars."

W. Somerset Maugham, now retired in the south of France, was invited to write one column, and replied: "I've resumed my amateur status as a writer, and having regained it after so many years I should be sorry to jeopardize it" . . . Mrs. W. Averell Harriman required seven stitches in her jaw when her face was cut by a jib during a yacht race in Belgium last week . . . When Ezio Pinza visited the MGM offices here yesterday, to sign his contract, a press agent said. "If there's any statement you want to make, I'll be glad to release it." Pinza thought a while, then stated: "The air-cooling system here is bad for my voice."

Dr. Albert Schweitzer, the missionary-philosopher, asked to meet Norman Thomas and told the Socialist leader that Eugene Debs was Schweitzer's second cousin . . . Kitty Kallen of the Versailles, who wants to include an impersonation of Mary Martin in her routine, was given a front-row center seat to "South Pacific" by Miss Martin, so that she could study the star's mannerisms . . . The story is being told of a patient, stark naked, who walked into a psychiatrist's office. When the psychiatrist asked what his trouble was, the naked man said: "I don't know exactly, but whenever I walk through the streets I imagine that everyone is looking at me."

Tydings Reports Truman Favors Observatory Move

By The Associated Press

President Truman was represented yesterday as supporting a request for $750,000 to begin construction of a new eight million dollar naval observatory at Charlottesville, Va.

Senator Tydings (D., Md.), told the Senate Appropriations Committee the President recommends moving the observatory from Washington to Charlottesville.

Mr. Truman also favors, he said, turning over part of the present observatory site to the District of Columbia for a huge new city hospital.

The funds would be made available through the third deficiency appropriations bill.

Italian Retrieves Pen In Volcano's Crater

Stromboli, Italy, July 20 (U.P.). Peppino Utano, a Strombolian laborer, today descended into the crater of the Stromboli volcano and found a fountain pen dropped into it five days ago by Art Cohn, RKO scenario writer.

Ingrid Bergman, making a film here, congratulated Utano on his exploit.

TRY IT SPRING IN THE AIR PLAY LEAPFROG

Try a game of leapfrog! First practice to see how high you can leap, but you may have to ask your partner to get down on his hands and knees when you start.

Be sure that the bottom person has his arms and legs well braced, so that you will not shove him off balance when you vault over him. Later with a little practice and a good push with your hands, you will be able to go over a player who is leaning forward with his hands on his knees.

After you have all practiced a bit, line up in file with plenty of room between players and all bend over in position. Then the back man jumps over each player until he is at the head of the line, where he takes his position while the next man jumps.

What's the Verdict?

Q. Williams, who owned a small garage, died apparently unmarried. However, a woman who says she is his common-law wife claims his estate. In an ensuing court action, the woman contends the assets are greater than the executor admits them to be. She offers in evidence part of his last three income tax returns, showing Williams' earning power. The other side objects to the introduction of the income tax returns by the woman, but in turn offers one of them to show Williams had declared himself unmarried, as proof the woman has no claim whatsoever to the estate. She objects to introduction of this evidence. What should the court rule?

A. As a general prosposition, courts do not admit hearsay evidence. An income tax return, offered by someone other than the maker, would be objectionable as hearsay because the declarant couldn't be cross-examined. But among the exceptions to the general rule is a declaration against self-interest. A man's admission that he owes income tax is a declaration against self-interest and the woman ought to be able to use that much of the income tax returns as evidence. But the executor's offer of part of a return listing Williams as single ought not be accepted. While a single man has to pay more tax than a married one, his general domestic fiscal liabilities as a single man are less than those of a married man, so a statement that he is single is scarcely a statement against self-interest—F. L. D.

Cases discussed illustrate general principles. They should not be construed as legal advice in particular cases. Take your legal problems to your lawyer.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Looks Like the Neatest Trick of the Week

Pete Doyle of 1731 Lyman pl. ne. says that a recent edition of our magazine section, Parade, contained the paragraph:

"Harrington was unworried. He dozed in his sleeping bag and read a Thorne Smith novel."

"Aha!" says Pete. "No wonder I've never been able to find time to read all the novels I'd like to. I've never learned how to read while dozing."

ADD SIMILES

As overworked as the phrase "famous make."

GENTLEMEN AND TV CAMERAS PREFER BLONDES

Broadcasting Magazine recently reported that blondes are more telegenic than brunettes, and that it is much harder to get a brunette properly lit up.

A hasty footnote explained that the article referred only to illuminating females appearing before television cameras.

NUTS-TO-THE-NATS NOTE

Russell J. Le Fevre of 4628 Livingston rd. se. reports that he and his wife listened to the radio broadcast of last Sunday's doubleheader, in which our Wondrous Nats took a two-ply trouncing.

At the end of the broadcast, the announcer informed his listeners: "Tomorrow will be an off-day for the Nats."

"Tomorrow will be an off-day?" echoed Mrs. Le Fevre. "What does he think today was?"

GIVE-AWAYS

"Male Belgian police puppy, 8 months old." (Chestnut 7076.)

"Very nice 7-month-old dog, likes children, sleeps outside at night; brown like a teddy bear." (Union 1309.)

"Pretty, playful gray cat and very cute long-haired 6-week-old kitten." (Woodley 5499 before 11 a. m. or after 6 p. m.)

"Gentle, affectionate female kitten, 2 months old, very playful; ideal pet for child." (Chestnut 6337.)

TICKET POLICY

Charles C. Moore, jr., of 2121 Virginia ave. nw. questions the accuracy of the recently published statement that District policemen give "courtesy cards" (instead of tickets) to parking violators from out of town.

I was inclined to share his suspicion that the item was wrong, because I've never seen such a courtesy card, or heard of anybody who got one.

However, the Police Department's Traffic Division says the story is correct.

First-time parking violators from 46 States escape the usual citation, and get a warning instead. That's because we want them to feel that they're welcome here.

But if they ignore the warning, "sterner measures" are employed. If necessary, the police crane is called into action, and the offending car towed away.

(Maryland and Virginia motorists get no special courtesies, or warnings, because they're considered home-town folks.)

PERSONAL NOTES

Marjorie Beck, Garrett Park, Md.: I agree with you about Mary Haworth's Mail. I don't think Mary, Shirley Povich, Jerry Kluttz or our other stars should be permitted to have vacations. (But how I'd yowl if they'd deny me mine.)

Jimmy Burch, 4921 Georgia ave. nw.: I'm very sorry that I don't have enough space to help people find lost dogs through this column, but if I hear of anybody who found a "white and black and brown spitz-collie about 10 years old," I'll sure tell them to call Taylor 8194.

Mrs. Joy L. Hicks, Stockton, Calif.: A local District Liner caught the same howler and submitted it first. He had a couple of thousand miles the best of it in his race with you.

Maxine Boyd, 5405 Dix st. ne.: Thanks for the kind words. It feels wonderful to be back—drawing a regular pay check again.

QUITE A DIFFERENCE

When Marjory Hendricks, mistress of Normandy Farm and Water Gate Inn, was on a television program recently, she was asked: "What's the difference between fritters and popovers?"

You can't stump a restaurant owner with a question like that. Marjory's answer was:

"Fritters frit and popovers pop."

NO INDEED

Jay Aitch says that just because a guy wears a crew haircut it's no sign he's either a gentleman or a sculler.

Why Lewis Ditched Work Policy

By Drew Pearson

Some people, including John L. Lewis, seem to have forgotten his all-too-familiar refrain: "No contract, no work."

Pearson

For today, John L. and the miners are doing what they vowed could not be done in the past. They have no contract, yet they are working.

There is a secret but excellent reason for this.

John L. is not above making a deal with the mine owners, and he has made one now. It was no accident that he recently declared that the coal industry needed a czar. In fact, such a czar has been agreed upon by Lewis and the Northern operators.

He is George Moses of the Frick Co.

And after his appointment is announced, the mine workers will get either a raise or an increase in the welfare fund. This has been agreed upon in advance, and that is the reason John L. is violating his old adage: "No contract, no work."

The Justice Department is investigating another angle of Lewis' cooperation with the mine owners—the three-day week. For the mine owners to declare a three-day week would be a violation of the antitrust laws, but since labor unions are immune from the antitrust laws, it is suspected that Lewis has put the three-day week across for the operators.

Wall Street's Boner

It was not Ben Fairless who really dictated United States Steel policy regarding the strike—but Wall Street.

The J. P. Morgan firm, which finances United States Steel, dictated every move from backstage, with Enders Voorhees, chairman of the finance committee, acting as chief dictator. The J. P. Morgan boys even wrote the telegram Ben Fairless sent the White House.

It was this remote Wall Street control that caused United States Steel to make one of the most stupid blunders in the entire negotiation. The Wall Streeters did not realize the union wanted no strike, that Phil Murray might have difficulty obtaining a strike vote.

But when United States Steel sent its abrupt telegram to Truman, turning down a fact-finding board, and demanding action under the Taft-Hartley Act, it swung the steelworkers overwhelmingly in favor of a strike. Later United States Steel had to reverse its position.

British and A-Bomb

The fact about the British atomic bomb negotiations is that Britain has never had any A-bombs stored on her territory. Two years ago it was planned to send six bombs to Scotland without the trigger mechanism — the most secret part of the bomb.

However, publication of the plans brought a flood of protests, and the shipment was called off.

Meanwhile we have received the lion's share of uranium from the Belgian Congo, with Britain getting only a dribble. Naturally this has rankled.

Control Uranium

Furthermore, the British stopped working on the A-bomb when we started joint development during the war. Since January, 1948, however, we have not been exchanging military atomic secrets with the British—only information about peacetime uses of atomic energy. The British now realize—as do our scientists—that peacetime uses of atomic energy are 10 or 15 years off, and its main current importance is military. Consequently they want to develop the atomic bomb, and have notified us that they want their share of Belgian uranium when the Belgian agreement expires shortly.

Uranium still is one of the scarcest metals in the world. The Russians have been searching frantically for it, have German slave labor combing southern Germany.

The British, meanwhile, are blessed with a virtual monopoly of uranium, first through Canada, second through their financial and political hold over Belgium.

President Truman, in outlining the British position at the secret Blair House meeting last week, was sympathetic. But because of England's juxtaposition to Europe, and easy bombing range from Russia, he—and the others—did not want A-bombs manufactured in England.

Some critics inside the Truman Cabinet point out that we armed Britain during the war, financed her after the war, and now face Britain's desire to manufacture A-bombs, and at the same time conduct one-sided trade with Russia and Argentina. In brief, we finance an ally over whose policies we have no influence.

FIRING ACROSS ATLANTIC—Dr. Karl Compton, chairman of the Research and Development Board, gave a secret briefing to brass hats recently at which he reported the first guided missile, capable of shooting across the Atlantic, will be completed in four or five years.

CENSORING MICHIGAN SCANDALS—In the secrecy of the State elections committee, Senator Knowland of California has gone to bat for his friend, Senator Ferguson of Michigan, by watering down the Senate report on vote frauds in Michigan. Senator Knowland doesn't want anything said about illegal campaign contributions from Michigan auto dealers, or about Ferguson's relations with Chrysler.
